GRIFFITH ANNOUNCES CABINET FOR NEW IRISH FREE STATE

De Valera and Nearly Half of Dail Leave Chamber as He Is Formally Elected—Bitter Struggle Looms For Control of Parliament About To Be Created—Griffith Promises Election Soon.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Dublin, Jan. 10.—Arthur Griffith, founder of the Sinn Fein, was today formally elected Irish president by Dail Eireann, (the Sinn Feinn parliament.) Griffith succeeds Eamonn de Valera who resigned because the Irish peace treaty was ratified by the Dail.

Griffith announced his cabinet as follows:

Foreign affairs—George Gavin Duffy.
Finance—Michael Collins.
Defence—Richard Mulcahy, chief of staff of the I. R. A.
Home affairs—E. J. Duggan.
Local government affairs—Deputy Cosgrave.
Economics—Deputy Higgin.

President Griffith and his cabinet constitute the provisional government of the Irish Free State which will shortly take over all administrative authority in Ireland (outside of Ulster province) from the British.

Eamonn de Valera and his adherents bolted Dail Eireann

De Valera gained the floor and said that he could not remain in the house while voting was in progress for Griffith. Accompanied by 55 of his followers, he left the hall. The deputies who remained then made the election of Griffith and his cabinet unanimous.

"The election of Griffith would degrade the office of president of the Irish republic," exclaimed De Valer angrily as he passed out of the legislative chamber.

Speaking on the motion to elect him president of the Irish Free State, Griffith said that the whole question of Irish peace would be referred to the people as soon as possible in a general election. This election will be for the purpose of choosing deputies to the new parliament which will be created under the law creating the Irish Free State.

De Valera insisted upon knowing whether Griffith would act as "president of the Irish republic."

"I shall hold the same powers as were held by my predecessor, Mr. De Valera, until the Irish Free State officially comes into being," replied Griffith.

Deputies holding the front benches engaged in heated exchanges.

Collins accused the Cork Republicans of "using black and tan methods." He charged the Cork adherents of De Valera with compelling the Cork Examiner to publish a certain political proclamation.

The Griffith-Collins faction which secured ratification of the Irish peace treaty, will be opposed by the De Valera-Brugha faction which opposed ratification. There will be a bitter struggle for control of the new parliament.

Griffith actually began the formation of the new government yesterday, giving rise to a premature report that his task had been completed and formally approved.

MILK BACTERIA AVERAGED YEARLY

Health Officer Johnston Defends His Methods—Milk Here Over 50 Per Cent Better Than Neighboring Cities.

Kingston, N. Y., January 9, 1922.

Editor, The Freeman:

My attention has been called to a recent editorial in which criticism was leveled at the Board of Health instead of the health officer.

At a regular meeting of the Board of Health held on June 8th, 1921, a resolution was passed authorizing the health officer to regrade such milk as did not meet the requirements set forth in the sanitary code. Accordingly some milk was regraded to Grade C., but on account of the inability to obtain bottle caps for this grade, this milk was allowed to be sold under the old grading until the Board of Health on July 13, ordered a supply of Grade C caps to enable the health officer to enforce this resolution without unreasonable hardship on the dealer or his customers. By reason of the multiplicity of details entering into the production and delivery of pure milk and the many opportunities for errors to creep into the technique, it was not deemed advisable by the health officer to regrade milk which exceeded the bacteria count in any one month, but rather for continued violation. Accordingly the milk of three different dealers has been regraded but in two cases the old grade was restored after an investigation by the health officer had demonstrated where the fault was and this fault corrected, the bacteria count droppin most satisfactorily after attention was directed to these errors.

The milk situation in this city while not perfect is greatly improved over that of six years ago and is over 50 per cent better than that produced in our neighboring cities. Your statement that "much of the Grade B. Raw Milk does not come up to the requirements for even that grade" is not borne out by the facts and figures. During the past year no dealer in Grade B. Raw Milk exceeded in average the requirements of the sanitary code, the highest yearly average being 145,000 bacteria count, and the lowest 24,000, a most remarkable count. The average for all dealers for the year was 86,000 which is considerably below the 200,000 allowed by the code.

The chief effect of low grade milk it seen in the results with children and the consequent infant mortality rate. In 1910 the infant mortality rate for this city was 164 per 1,000, while in 1920 it was 81 per 1,000, and this year 72 per 1,000, the lowest rate in the city's history and lower than any city in this sanitary district. Of these deaths there were only 12 due to gastro intestinal diseases, a worthy proof that the milk of this city is of good uniform quality.

In regard to the Judge Van Etten farm, he has sold his milk during 1921 to the Kingston Milk Producers' Creamery, where it is mixed with other milk, thereby losing its identity. Neither the board of health nor the health officer has any authority to direct a producer where he shall dispose of his milk or at what price, and if Judge Van Etten chose to accept a lower price and lower grade for his products neither the board nor its officers had the power to intervene. If any injustice had been done to the community it has been done by the judge himself in not giving the people an opportunity of obtaining this milk separately, and in applying for a permit to sell either Grade A or certified milk according to the requirements of the code. No application has been received at this office as yet from Judge Van Etten to sell either of the above grades.

The milk sold in the city of Kingston compares most favorably with that sold in any other city of the state and our records of infant mortality and milk born of infectious diseases substantiates this statement.

Respectfully,
FRANK A. JOHNSTON,
Health Officer.

72 DEGREES ABOVE BUT CUTTING ICE

Thermometers along the Strand registered from 70 to 72 degrees above zero early this afternoon, and it was an ideal spring day. The warm weather has not stopped whatever ice harvesting is under way, however, and the Binnewater Lake Ice Company is harvesting 11 inch ice of good quality from the Binnewaters. At Catskill ice cutting has started on the lower Catskill creek where Stead & Hughes are harvesting fine 10 inch ice.

No ice has been harvested from the Hudson river as yet, and from Catskill comes the report that the Knickerbocker Ice Company there is waiting until there is 12 inch ice in the river before cutting and storing is started.

The Catskill Mail says that the present temperature is not making any perceptible increase in the thickness of the ice. For the past few days the weather has been very mild during the day, but after the sun had gone down the temperature drops and what thawing there was during the day is followed by slight freezing.

Two or three zero nights with temperature well below freezing during the day are needed to put the river ice in the desired condition for cutting and harvesting.

OTHERS GAVE

Of Time and Means to Ex-Service Men's Holiday.

In the report of the Christmas dinner given the ex-service men of Woodstock by Mrs. McHugh, the generosity of one or two donors was not publicly acknowledged and the inadvertent omission is herewith corrected.

In addition to the box of candy and box of cigarettes given each guest of honor by the joint cooperating of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion, the Red Cross and the committee in Kingston, a pound box of chocolates and a box of cigarettes were taken to another disabled ex-service man, and to this committee gift was added fruit and other candy from Mrs. McHugh.

A box of cigars was also provided the ex-service men at the dinner by Mr. Fitzpatrick, of Fitzpatrick & Draper.

Another kind act was that of Donald McFadden, who gave up an engagement of his own to convey the ex-service men from the dinner to the movies and the local committee members to their homes after the dinner.

HE SAW SNOWMAN

Englishman Corroborates Story Told by Explorers.

Probability That There Is a Mysterious Race That Has Not Been Reached by Civilization.

William Hugh Knight, a member of the British Royal Geloetics club, recently recalled to a representative of the London Times an occasion some years ago when he was able to inspect closely a figure which he believes to be that of one of the "Abominable Snowmen" to whom reference has been made by members of the Mount Everest expedition. He said:

"Shortly before the last Tibetan war I was returning from Tibet with another European, a Tibetan guide, and our train of about forty or fifty coolies. We were coming down the track which leads from Gnaton to Sedeuchen. We wanted to go to Gantok by the higher track, but Tenzin Wangdi, our guide, said the coolies would not face the leeches, so we had to take the lower track, which roughly follows the river. As we got near Gantok we had to climb the long ascent. My companion had gone on ahead with the coolies. I was about half a mile behind, about half a mile below Gantok.

"I stopped to breathe my horse, as an open clearing, and dismounted, loosened the girths and watched the sun, which was just about setting. While I was musing I heard a slight sound and, looking round, I saw, some fifteen or twenty paces away, a figure which I now suppose must have been one of the hairy men that the Everest expedition talk about and the Tibetans, according to them, call the 'Abominable Snowman.'

"Speaking to the best of my recollection, he was a little under six feet high, almost stark naked in that bitter cold—it was the month of November. He was a kind of pale yellow all over, about the color of a Chinaman, a shock of matted hair on his head, huge body on his feet, highly muscular legs, and large, formidable hands. His muscular development in the arms, shoulders, back and chest was terrific. He had in his hand what seemed to be some form of primitive bow. He did not see me, but stood, there, and I watched him for some five or six minutes. So far as I could make out, he was watching some man or beast far down the hillside. At the end of some five minutes he started off at a run down the hill, and I was impressed with the tremendous speed at which he traveled.

"So far as I can remember, I mentioned the matter in the dining room that night, and to Captain Wigh when I saw him at the residency next morning, but my recollection is that they took it rather as a matter of course. The incident more or less passed out of my mind until I read about the tracks in the snow written of by members of the Mount Everest expedition."

Novelty in Postage.

When the Australian soldiers were on their way to the great war, they flung hundreds of bottles overboard with messages and many of them were cast up on the beaches. The passengers on the Cunard liner Fort Pirie, which has just run from London to Melbourne by way of South Africa in 30 days, tried a new way of communicating with their friends in Great Britain. When 20 miles off Las Palmas, they launched a raft, upon which was a tin containing 40 letters and 45 shillings to cover the cost of postage, together with a request in Spanish and English that the finder should post the letters by the first available mail. A flagstaff carrying a Union Jack had been erected on the raft and in the early morning the passengers watched the departure of their novel mail delivery.

Coal in Africa.

The coal reserves of South Africa are roughly computed at 75,000,000,000 tons; which, added to an estimate of 6,500,000,000 tons available in northern and southern Rhodesia, comprises a total of 81,500,000,000 tons. The estimated total for the whole continent of Africa is in the neighborhood of 100,000,000,000 tons, of which 90 per cent is under British administration.

Of the two chief classes of coal being mined—anthracite and bituminous—about one-fifth of the South African product comes under the former description and four-fifths under the latter, a small percentage being classed as sub-bituminous, brown or lignite. Over 85 per cent of the Rhodesian product is bituminous.

Flash Removed From Gunfire.

Flashless gunpowder is one of the recent developments of the United States ordnance department.

Smokeless powder took away the tell-tale smoke and, ever since, ordnance experts have been working to get a flashless, smokeless powder. The success of their experiments is indicated by the report that guns as large as five inches have been fired at night with so little glow that observers standing 20 yards away could hardly notice it. It is said that sodium and potassium chloride are two of the chemical substances introduced into the powder to eliminate the flash.—Popular Science Monthly.

Cause of Farsightedness.

Farsightedness is caused by an abnormal flatness of the lens of the eye or a defect of the eyeball that increases the focal length of the lens and causes parallel rays from a distant object to come to a focus beyond the retina.—Popular Science Monthly.

WAR TORTURED STOMACH FREED FROM MISERY

Wounded Overseas Man Gets Great Relief with Jaques' Wonder Capsules

"For three years and five months of the World War I wore the khaki of an infantryman. Through the hell of Ypres, St. Eloi, Arras, the Somme, Amiens and Paschendale, we trudged through the mire. The mud and the slush and the constant shelling took their toll of the men's morale, but even worse than this were the cold rations, or none.

"I suffered from stomach trouble as others did, without aid, until wounded at St. Eloi, in the spring of 1916; then came the Red Cross hospital in England. Again duty called me back into the shell swept areas of Belgium, broken in constitution, but able to carry a rifle. Gradually starving, yet carrying on, as others did, down to a weight of about 110 pounds, until one day an enemy shell got me again—Blighty, England, for me.

"Days in the hospital. Then before a medical board, ordered back to Canada, and there discharged as medically unfit. During all these months of careful medical treatment every effort was made to restore my appetite and train my stomach to digest food, but without success.

"I returned to my home in Syracuse, N. Y., shattered in health, unable to digest my food and altogether despondent. In 1919 my work took me to Plattsburg, N. Y., where I became acquainted with Jaques' Little Wonder Capsules. I took the capsules and I am today free from the constant misery in my stomach.

"Through my love of the old uniform I do not feel that I can have my name published, but if anyone interested will drop a line to the Jaques Capsule Co., Plattsburg, N. Y., they will be given my name and address."

On sale by Wm. F. Dedrick, 308 Wall St., Kingston, N. Y.; or 60 cents by mail postpaid for large package from Jaques Capsule Co, Plattsburg, N. Y.—Advertisement.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonsful of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

The reported resignation of Will H. Hays from the postmaster generalship in President Harding's cabinet has caused many rumors to the effect that Colonel William Boyce Thompson of New York will probably accept the appointment. Mr. Hays is expected to leave the cabinet about January 15 to accept the offer of motion picture producers to act as director general of the industry.

Old Saying Traced.

The saying, "When in Rome," used most often as an admonition to people who seem unable to accommodate themselves to the ways and manners of those they associate with, is one of the most ancient anecdotes known to literature. It refers to a witty conversation between St. Augustine and St. Ambrose. St. Augustine was somewhat puzzled about the regulations concerning abstinence from high feasting, because in some parts of Italy Saturday was observed as a fast day, and in others Sunday was set aside for abnegation. He consulted St. Ambrose, calling his attention to the fact that in Rome Saturday was a fast day, while in Milan no such restriction prevailed. St. Ambrose answered: "When I am in Milan I do not fast on Saturday. When in Rome I do fast on Saturday."

By No Means.

"The road to hell is paved with good intentions," says the proverb, but, as a modern politician has remarked, the beauty of the pavement does not improve the destination.—The Bodleian.

IN BRIGHT COLORS

Tweeds and Woolens for Outer Apparel Are in Limelight.

Coats and Suits Longer for Larger Women—Short and Chic for Small Figures.

At this time of the year, notes a fashion writer, we are doing our "noblest" by sport clothes of all descriptions. And more especially this season since tweeds and woolens for outer apparel have come so prominently into the limelight.

One used to be accustomed to the remark that ran something like this: "I can't bear to wear woolens even in winter time, because they are much too heavy." Then a glimpse of silk-clad legs sent a shiver down the observer's spine, but the conclusion could only be that this was a human being superior to cold. Now, to look at the same women clad to their necks in wool is something of a shock until one reflects that it is fashion, after all, which makes the costume wearable or not wearable, and that it has nothing whatever to do with the weather. It can be fur in summer and gauze in winter, only according to what is "done." This year the dressing just happens to be in harmony with the weather.

Plain Topcoat, Terra Cotta and Black.

The coats of the tweed suits and the homespun suits are growing longer. That is, for some figures they are made on quite generous lines, while for other and smaller women the coats remain short and chic. There is something about a tweed suit which can entirely submerge a small figure or a retiring personality and, therefore, one must be awfully careful when making a choice. There are subtle ways of managing this little detail so that every one looks well in a suit of this character, but there must be that management displayed if all is to go well and if the suit is to be satisfactory to the very end, which is a long way off.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Velveteen frocks for the tiny tot are being shown.

The fashion for small bags does not exist. The larger the better is the new idea.

When using mixing board always put a newspaper under it to catch all the flour; saves much time.

The newest cotton fabric blouses are trimmed with latticework of self-fabric, or with little panels or bands of ladder plaiting.

One of the latest whims of smartly dressed women is bracelets made of fur to match the gown, but not fastened to the sleeves. To the underside are attached tassels or streamers.

Openwork is featured in many of the season's good-looking tailored frocks, no matter what the fabric. Fine chiffon velvet is treated in this manner when the velvet forms the major portion of the frock, with underslip in silk in contrasting color.

The greatest possible variety is evident in coats that are a part of the three-piece costume. A waist-length eton or bolero, a hip-length pony or flared model or a full-length coat may be used. In the full-length coats, or those reaching almost to the skirt's hem, many side-fastening models are shown and waistcoat bodices are often used with the shorter coats.

The three-piece suit, or dress with coat to match, is one of the popular styles of the present season.

Fruit Bonbons.

Take fresh candied orange rind or citron. Scrape off sugar. Cut into small squares. Boil three cupfuls of sugar to candy consistency, then, with a fork, dip the squares of fruit into the sugar and twist them around until they are quite coated. Put on platter rubbed with salad oil to cool. These will keep indefinitely if put in a tin box.

Lace Frocks.

Heavy ecru lace combined with black silk crepe is one of the smart things in the new French clothes. One charming evening frock shows a bodice of the ecru lace with a skirt of black.

Why Leek Is Welsh Emblem.

While marching to battle against an English army in A. D. 640, Welsh soldiers plucked leeks to place in their caps to distinguish themselves from the enemy. They won a great victory that day, and the leek was chosen as the emblem of Wales.

FARMERS FIGHT FOR COURT DAY

Dispute Over Picturesque Institution at Lexington, Ky.

CUSTOM OVER CENTURY OLD

City Dwellers Win First Round, but Farmers Are Still in the Fight—Case Involves Block in Center of City Used by Farmers as Market for Their Horses, Mules and Live Stock—Citizens Complain of Unsightliness.

Kentucky has had its feuds in the mountains and its duels in the bluegrass and the purchase; but not for a century has a more bitter, bloodless feud been fought than that now being staged in the courts here between the farmers of Fayette county and the city dwellers of Lexington.

For the city dwellers have decreed that "court day" on Cheapside, a block in the center of the city, an institution of a century's duration, must go. And the farmers say that "court day" must stay.

The courts have decided in favor of the city dwellers once, but a mistake was made in not including the county in the suit to abolish the custom of farmers bringing their horses and mules and live stock of all kinds to Cheapside for sale and of the people of the countryside gathering in the shadow of the statue of John Cabell Breckinridge, former Vice President of the United States, to discuss the political issues of the day. For, it develops, Cheapside has for 116 years been the property of the county.

Dates From 1790.

Back in 1790 Cheapside was the center of the city of Lexington, then the metropolis of the West. At that time the city trustees ordered the first market house erected on the square. The pillory and the stocks, the public well and the courthouse (as at present) stood on Cheapside. There on Wednesdays and Saturdays the country people brought in their produce and the city dweller and the country dweller met, traded, swapped tales and talked politics. In later years James Lane Allen, a Kentucky writer, made Cheapside famous with his description of the monthly "court day," the last of the ancient institutions of central Kentucky.

In 1806, it develops, the city of Lexington deeded Cheapside to the county of Fayette. Since that time the county has been responsible for it.

Appearance Causes Complaint.

In late years the brick pavement of Cheapside has become pitted and rough. On court days it is crowded with farmers and live stock and wagons loaded with produce—this once a month. On other days automobiles filled the places, parked at all angles.

For many months there have been complaints of the unsightliness of Cheapside and the apparent lack of authority by the city police. So action was started in the Circuit court to force the city to "abate the nuisance." The Circuit court ordered the "nuisances" abated. But the court did not count on the county. Now the action has been revived through filing of a petition by the county declaring it alone has jurisdiction over this plot of ground, containing perhaps a quarter of an acre in the heart of the city.

What the result will be cannot be told until the Circuit court again acts and the Court of Appeals has its final say. But one thing is certain, the country folk are going to fight to the last ditch to retain their plot of ground in the city where they can gather, sell their stock and talk politics.

SMALL WIRELESS OUTFITS

Many Installed in Paris to Get Correct Greenwich Time.

Fifteen hundred small wireless outfits have been installed in Paris jewelry, watch and clock stores to enable the jewelers to catch the correct Greenwich Meridian time as it is sent daily at ten o'clock by the Eiffel Tower. Formerly the exact time had to be obtained from the observatory by telephone.

The installation is simplicity itself. The outfit, about nine inches in diameter, is hung on a nail in the wall. A copper wire run down to the cellar or along a water or gaspipe serves as a "ground wire," while the removal of the bulb from a nearby electric light and the insertion of a contact plug take the place of antennae. It can be done in five minutes.

The outfit can be regulated to hear everything that is sent out from the Eiffel Tower. A correspondent listened in when the press matter was being sent out one day and the signals were clear and easily heard.

Postmasters to Seek Lost Persons.

Postmasters throughout the country will assist in locating missing persons, in accord with a request of Postmaster General Hays. The postmasters will not interfere with family affairs, but will make inquiries from other postmasters and notify relatives.

Only Families With Children Taken.

Frank H. Kryder of Fort Wayne, Ind., has a house to rent but will not consider a couple without children. "Where would you and I be if our parents had been unable to rent houses because of having children?" asks Mr. Kryder.

Actual work on the great suspension bridge over the Delaware river, from Camden, N. J., to Philadelphia, has begun. The first blows marking the opening of the construction were struck by Governor Sproul, of Pennsylvania, and Governor Edwards, of New Jersey. The opening formalities marked the building of what will be the world's largest suspension bridge, the single span of more than 1,700 feet being unsurpassed anywhere in the world. The bridge is expected to be opened for traffic on July 4, 1926. The top photograph shows a model of the great span that marks a new epoch in American enterprise. Below is Governor Edwards of New Jersey and Governor Sproul of Philadelphia, who struck the first blows marking the building of the giant span.

ELIZABETH M. BROWN, R. N.

Power From Sewage Gas.

From Australia comes a plan, reported in Popular Science Monthly, to generate an industrial gas from the sewage of towns. The British ministry is investigating the claims of the inventor as to the yield from this source. Analysis of the gas shows that on an average it consists of 60 per cent methane, 17 per cent nitrogen, 8 per cent hydrogen, 14 per cent carbon monoxide, and 1 per cent oxygen. Experts declare that there is no reason why, properly controlled, advantage should not be taken of the bacteriological action of sewage in septic tanks. Tests made to determine the horsepower developed in engines resulted very successfully.

A Pointed Question.

Billy, age five, noticed a picture of "Darby and Joan" and asked who they were. Mother told him they were two who never quarreled or were never cross with each other. After a moment's reflection he said: "Do you suppose there are people like that?"

Paradise of Savagery

New Guinea Woman and Baby.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

Perhaps it is logical enough that less should be known about the largest heavily inhabited island in the world—New Guinea—than about the smaller and more easily traversed lands of the sea, especially since it lies, like the neighboring continent of Australia, near the antipodes of the western world, far from the beaten track.

This island has come into notice recently through the action of the League of Nations in giving to Australia the mandate for its northeastern quarter, formerly a colonial possession of Germany. It is probable, too, that it may be one of the subjects of discussion when the problems of the Pacific are taken up in Washington.

Except for a fringe of a few widely separated settlements and mission stations along the coasts, New Guinea (or Papua, to give it its native name) is a paradise of savagery. Probably in no other area of equal extent in the world has civilization made so light an imprint. In the interior of the great island heads are hunted as in smaller regions elsewhere, cannibal feasts are held, savage dialects are spoken innocent of any modification by civilized language, primitive weapons are used, and there is practically no contact with and no knowledge of the outside world.

Origin of Papuans Unknown.

The origin of the "oriental negroes" of Papua is an unsolved problem to ethnologists. On most of the islands to the east and north and toward Asia, straight-haired, relatively fair Malays are found. But the Papuans are black, woolly-haired negroes like the natives of the far-away Guinea coast of western Africa. It was this resemblance between the inhabitants of Papua and Guinea that gave the island its more common name among westerners. Though the Papuan race is distinct, and though large numbers of the pure stock exist on the island, the negro strain has also been mixed with Malayan blood, resulting in numerous racial gradations.

The natives of the southeastern part of the island may be said to look back to the days of their arboreal, pre-human ancestors, for they live in rude leaf and straw-thatched hovels which they construct in trees. Though this custom of tree-dwelling is not followed to any great extent in other portions of New Guinea, the natives of the island all seem determined to live well off the ground. The favorite habitations throughout a large part of the country are constructed on high piles. On the protected ground beneath these structures the culinary operations are usually carried on. Many of the buildings are long, narrow communal affairs housing a score or more of natives. In many cases these habitations are merely dark tunnels, but in others they are divided into compartments. Clothing bothers the Papuans but little, but they give much attention to painting and tatooing their bodies and to bedecking themselves with neck, nose and ear ornaments.

Odd Native Customs.

There is very little furniture in Papuan dwellings to be shifted about by the "lady of the house" on cleaning day. Important among the few movables are hard narrow wooden blocks, scooped out to fit the neck—"pillows" which would hardly appeal to westerners as substitutes for their soft down-filled cushions.

Some of the tribes near the coast have a passion for bathing, so great that they impute a love of the water to the spirits of their departed tribesmen. To facilitate "spirit bathing," surviving relatives and friends carefully construct and keep open paths leading from each grave to the sea.

When they are not dining on choice cuts from some enemy tribesman, Papuans eat in the main a prosaic enough diet of bananas, yams, sago, breadfruit and the meats of various animals and fish. But as choice tidbits, some of the tribes eat certain insects and the meat of the world's largest clam. The shells of these huge bivalves often weigh 500 pounds, and the meat alone 20 pounds.

Religiously, New Guinea is a mixture, just as it is politically. Mohammedanism has a slight foothold on the west coast, due to the contact of the tribes there with the Mohammedans of the islands extending off toward Asia. Christian missions are located at intervals along the coast all around the island, but the number of natives so far Christianized is small. On some of the tiny islands lying in the strait between New Guinea and Australia entire communities of Christians are to be found. Throughout most of the huge island, however, paganism is rampant, the natives propitiating supposed evil spirits and the forces of nature.

Because New Guinea is so far from countries with whose size we are familiar, we are likely to consider its extent rather vague. If the island could be laid down along our Atlantic coast we would soon appreciate its vastness. It is approximately 1,500 miles long, and would reach from the southern tip of Florida to the northernmost point on the coast of Maine. Its 400 miles of width would cover two-thirds the distance of Bermuda. The area of the island is close to 300,000 square miles, and it is supposed to have about 1,000,000 inhabitants.

History of the Island.

New Guinea was discovered more than half a century before Australia was first sighted, but while the latter has come to have a population of 5,000,000 white people, and is the seat of an important, modern Christian government, the former is still almost the undisputed domain of savagery. The Dutch laid the first claim to territory in the island, but confined their operations to the western end. In 1884 the British established a protectorate over the southwestern portion of the country, and the Germans annexed the northeastern part the same year. The three countries agreed on boundaries in 1885, but their partition of the land was almost wholly an action on paper, for there had been little exploration of the interior. Each country in the years since has established a few trading and mission posts and plantations in the coast country and has set up the skeleton of a government, whose functioning, however, has had little effect in the interior.

The British portion of Papua has had the status of a territory of the federal government of Australia since 1906, and the recent action of the League of Nations in placing the former German New Guinea in Australian hands under mandate gives that commonwealth control of a little over half of the island's total area.

Strange Animal Life.

The animal life of the world's biggest tropical island, like that of neighboring Australia, is strange and bizarre in western eyes. In ancient geologic ages Papua and Australia were connected. Apparently for millions of years they have been separated entirely from the rest of the world, so that their animal types are a survival from the remote past. With the exception of the pig, which probably was brought from Asia relatively recently, all of the mammals of New Guinea are either marsupials which carry their young in pockets, like the opossum and the kangaroo, or are beasts that lay eggs like birds.

What New Guinea lacks in beasts of the field it makes up in birds of the air. As the home of hundreds of species of feathered creatures, it is more favored than many other portions of the earth's surface. Its dense tropical forests are alive with them—birds of almost every conceivable size and shape and of a bewildering combination of colors. Most striking of the many birds that count New Guinea their home is the gorgeously colored and beautifully formed bird-of-paradise. Most interesting is the romantic and ingenious bower-bird, which builds a "pleasure dome" solely as a place for its love-making

CITY OF WIZARDS

Place of Weird Wonders Is Located in Lower Burma.

According to Natives, the People There Possess Characteristics of Both Man and Demon.

There is a town in Lower Burma which is surely the most weird and uncanny place on the map.

Few Europeans have ever penetrated to it, but Indians who have been there declare it is inhabited by wizards and necromancers who wield strange powers.

Visitors who enter this town of Kale Thaungtot are said to be doomed. A native who went there found a terrible silence brooding over the place. His bearers would not go near the place, declaring that the marshes which almost encircle it are the abode of beings, neither human nor supernatural, but possessing the characteristics of both man and demon.

The woods are entirely devoid of bird life, but extraordinary and grotesque noises are heard coming from deeper parts of the forest. The night is made hideous with the sound of gongs and the wild chanting of wizards invoking the spirits of the dead to reappear.

Strange are the stories of miracles told about this town. A trader saw a fowl taken out of a bag, its head cut off and then put on again, after which the bird, when placed on the ground, walked away.

Another traveler in Burma has averred that he saw a necromancer expand himself by some means into the size of a balloon, collapse, and disappear to the sound of an explosion!

There are wizards who believe they can transform themselves into the shape of wild animals, and they strike terror into the hearts of the superstitious natives.

Women who have been rubbed with oil enchanted by a wizard are said to lose their reason and to flee away into the woods, says a writer in the Occult Review. They retain their human shape for seven days, and if within that period a man shall submit himself to the same process of being anointed with the magic ointment, and shall follow the woman to the woods and strike her on the head with a heavy bar, she shall recover her reason and return home cured.

If, however, this is not done, at the end of the seven days she is transformed into a tigress.

Italian Industry Threatened.

In the sulphur industry of southern Italy, American competition dominates, and unless some understanding can be reached with American producers it is difficult to see how this important industry can continue to operate. During the first years in which American sulphur became an important factor in the market, an agreement for a division of territory was entered into with the Sicilians, but at present the superiority of the American companies over their foreign competitors is so great that there would appear to be no reason why they should make concessions. However, it is reported that an representative of the American sulphur producers is now in Italy with a view to discussing the situation.—Commerce Reports.

Sand Dunes a Nuisance.

A large area a few miles north of Winnemucca, Nev., is covered with sand dunes that were formed since Lake Lahontan disappeared. These dunes are fully 75 feet thick, and their steeper slopes are on the east side, indicating that the whole vast field of sand is slowly traveling eastward. The march of this sand is irresistible, and its progress has necessitated a number of changes in the roads in the southern part of Little Humboldt valley during recent years. In some places in this region the telegraph poles have been buried so deep that they have had to be spliced in order to keep the wires above the crests of the sand dunes. The sand is of a light creamy yellow color and forms beautiful ridges and waves that are covered with an artistic fretwork of wind ripples.

Making Real Rubies.

In the Heller laboratories in Paris there are chemists who are able to accomplish in a few hours what nature requires thousands of years to complete.

It was after years of experimenting, that M. Verneuil produced in his own laboratory a genuine ruby. Since then not only rubies, but many tinted sapphires also have been made. That they are the real article, as perfect as nature's precious stones, is proved, and they answer to every known test. They contain exactly the same substances as natural gems, and are subjected to mechanical forces that are similar to those employed by nature in her laboratory underground.—Popular Science Monthly.

Joke on the Joker.

The bookkeeping class and the physiology class were the only ones which recited on the deserted third floor. I got there first and hid in the closet, where the skeleton used by the physiology class was kept. The rest of the members of the class clattered to their seats. I planned to groan and make ghostlike noises to frighten them. I started to move about and knocked the skeleton down. The teacher opened the door quickly. You can imagine how I felt at this moment, with the skeleton on top of me.—Exchange.

Inextinguishable Fire.

During the reign of Constantine III the Saracens besieged the city of Constantinople for five months, but were then obliged to retire. They returned seven times during as many successive years, but were each time repulsed by Callimachus, who in 668 invented an inextinguishable fire by which he destroyed their ships. The Greek or liquid fire was made principally of naphtha or liquid bitumen mixed from green firs. Water, instead of extinguishing, quickened this powerful agent of destruction, which nothing but sand, wine or vinegar could check. For 400 years the Greeks kept the secret of its composition, but the Mohammedans at length discovered and used it. This fire remained in use until the middle of the Fourteenth century, when it was superseded by gunpowder.

American Bible Society.

The American Bible society was organized in New York city in 1816, to encourage a wider circulation of the Bible. In 1841 an act of incorporation was made and in 1852 "Bible House" was built, one of the oldest office buildings in New York city. The board of managers consists of 36 laymen and the object is to translate and circulate the Holy Scripture to all the ends of the earth and especially among the benighted and destitute. It is strictly undenominational and during 100 years 117,139,711 volumes have been distributed, printed in 164 languages. The society is maintained by bequests, endowments and subscriptions.

Concerning the Poppy.

To the farmer the poppy is an unwelcome weed. In the old days, however, the flower was held in great esteem, being dedicated to Ceres, the goddess of agriculture. It played an important part in harvest-home celebrations and other ceremonies, and was protected in the countryside. Today, in Switzerland, the poppy is used as a love token. Girls place a petal in the palm of their left hand and strike it with their right. If the petal bursts with a sharp "pop" the lover in the case is held to be sincere. If there is no sound the girl believes him false.

Famous Persons.

Somebody who writes for the Argonaut has collected a number of insignificant facts about significant persons. Oliver Wendell Holmes used to carry a horse chestnut in one pocket and a potato in another to ward off rheumatism. Edgar Allan Poe slept with his cat and was inordinately proud of his feet. Robert Browning shuffled his feet so constantly that he wore holes in the carpet. Sardou imagined he had a perpetual cold. Count Tolstoi was very rich, but he wore the cheapest clothes that he could buy. Among the man who wore his finger nails almost daily long.—Detroit News.

From the Spanish.

While the word "vamoose" is considered purely an Americanism of the slang species, it is really a corruption of a perfectly good Spanish word, "vamos," which means literally "let us go." The word attained popularity during the war with Spain and was probably brought into common usage by American sailors, ever ready to adopt an expression of a forceful substitute for "decamp" and "run along" and the more expressive "beat it." But in adopting it they changed its pronunciation and spelling a trifle.

Bacteria on Fruit.

Not long ago there was made known the result of an examination made by one of the government scientists of the colonies of bacteria residing on the surface of unwashed fruit taken from the markets. This scientist computed the number of bacteria found on half a pound of each of the fruits named, as follows: Huckleberries, 400,000; damsons, 470,000; yellow plums, 700,000; pears, 800,000; gooseberries, 1,000,000; garden strawberries, 2,000,000; raspberries, 4,000,000; grapes, 8,000,000; currants, 11,000,000; cherries, 12,000,000.

Baby's Big Cigar.

A traveler in South America writes: "As far as we observed, the landlord's four-year-old daughter had not acquired a taste for rum, but she had acquired with the formation of a habit which Colombian women, at least the rank and file, have acquired in advance of their northern sisters. Sitting cross-legged on a bench chattering baby-talk she contentedly smoked a large black cigar, around or partly around which her tiny forefinger coiled in stereotyped form. Her mother gave her a light and seemed quite feignedly proud of her offspring's accomplishment."

Agreed With Her.

Lady—"Aren't you ashamed to beg? You are so ragged that I am ashamed of you myself." Hobo—"Yes, it is kind of a reflection on the generosity of the neighborhood, mum."—American Legion Weekly.

American Coal in Demand.

Coal is now being shipped from the United States to such markets as Aden, Uruguay, Ceylon, Egypt, India Argentina, Mauritius and Zanzibar.

CHRISTMAS AT THE CITY HOME

Like all other city institutions, the Kingston City Home was most generously remembered during the Christmas holidays, both with gifts and entertainment for the old people that made Christmas, 1921, one long to be remembered.

Nor were the four old ladies at the hospitals—one at the Kingston City and three at the Benedictine Hospital—forgotten because they were not at the home when the good times were going on. Mrs. Thomas Hayes saw to it that they had their share of the Merry Christmas, insofar as they could have. Mrs. John Martin baked a cake especially for them; a friend contributed jelly, Frank Coykendall gave ice cream, and the Knights of Columbus furnished candy and Christmas cards.

The following is a list of the contributions to and entertainments for the home during the month of December, 1921.

Men's Bible Class of the Fair Street Reformed Church—For the men's department pipes, tobacco, handkerchiefs and one year's subscription to the Christian Herald.

Public School Nos. 7 and 8—Eleven cakes.

Public School No 6—Christmas tree.

Public School No 5—Fruit, candy, nuts, etc

Miss Mary McGill—Crullers

The Misses Rice—For women's department, aprons and candy; year's subscription the Ladies' Home Journal

Mrs Kirkpatrick, Washington avenue—$1 for Christmas tree.

Girls' Friendly Society—Oranges for each member of home.

Young People's Societies from the various churches—Candy, fruit, ice cream and cakes, handkerchiefs and one new dollar bill for each member, also $2 25 to start a phonograph record case fund

Ice cream, Frank Coydandall.

Daughters of America—$5

Sabler's Sanitarium—$5

Knights of Columbus—$15 for candy and Christmas, also money from Mrs John Forsyth, Miss Ruth Smith, Hazel Dutton, and Miss Gruber From this fund Mrs. Thomas Hayes kindly bought and prepared 3 boxes of candy and a Christmas card for every employe and inmate of the home

Mullen's Tobacco Shop—Tobacco

Mrs W Converse Kellogg—Postals addressed to each member of home

Needlework Guild and friends—Work bag containing knick knacks, candy, oranges, cards, etc., for the women's department.

Mrs Sam Bernstein—Silk bags containing Japanese small body warmers for each member of woman's department

Phonograph records, Miss Cromie, Miss Craw and Mrs. E. E Swartz

Mr Truesdale—Tuning and repairing piano including new string.

Through the kindness of Richard Fox and William Miller, taxi service garage owners, a number of the old ladies were taken in closed cars for a ride through the business sections of both up and down town districts to see the brightly lighted Christmas streets and shop windows and all received a candy cane.

The Christmas tree still stands in the women's sitting room, a joy to all beholders The bulbs used in lighting were kindly furnished by the Kingston Gas and Electric Co.

Sunday services—Christmas Sunday service was in charge of young ladies from Clinton Avenue Church, and Mr. Kelsey gave the Christmas lesson New Year's service was conducted by Mr Kelsey and Mr. Wood

Entertainments—The children of Public School No 5 gave a very much enjoyed entertainment Friday afternoon, December 23, leaving gifts for all

The young people of the various city churches gave an entertainment of great merit composed of musical selections solo dancing, readings and sleight of hand performance, serving ice cream and cake afterwards and giving the presents mentioned above, Tuesday evening, December 27.

Children's Department (Outdoor Relief)

Kiwanis Club—4 candy pails of candy and large quantity of new toys

Gildersleeve Theater Management Christmas Committee—Food, clothing and toys.

Master Algernon Hasbrouck—Toys.

Mrs George B Main—Toys.

Mrs J D Schoonmaker—Candy and oranges

ON-A-JOB, OFF-A-JOB JIM!

Being a Story
Of how Jim got on a job and why he got off it again.

Once more Charlie led Jim off to a job. It was one that made Jim gasp when he first realized just what he was up against The scene of his future activities was a scrap iron yard. His duty was to sort out the various kinds of iron. The day was cold, the iron scraps were covered with a thin coating of frost which made the handling of the junk a very painful process.

By noon his hands were torn and blistered as though he had been putting them in a fire. He spent his noon hour searching for a store to purchase canvas gloves, and he attacked his afternoon task with more alacrity. Several men besides himself were working on the job They, like he, sorted out the various kinds of iron and threw each piece into one of the heaps within ten feet of the scrap pile.

There was a wrinkled old man with bent head and a hump between his shoulders, grown from the continual stooping over with shovel and pick. He seemed to regard Jim with special interest, and during the first day Jim caught sight of him watching from a distance.

On the second day he came near, too near, for Jim had some difficulty in avoiding him, as he threw an iron bar into a pile nearby. "Keep out of the way," shouted Jim.

"I ain't afraid you'll hit me," croaked the old man "Go ahead with yer chuckin

Jim bent to the pile again, lifted a part of a stove, whirled it through the air, and gasped with horror. It came so near the old man's head that Jim could not understand why he was still standing after the iron passed him "If you don't get out of the way I'll thrash you!" bellowed Jim.

"Don't you worry young sir, though you might throw them lower, muttered the man as he trudged back to his pile

Jim continued his work It was hard enough at best, without having to refrain from hitting those around him. For quite a while he was undisturbed His hands ached from the rough treatment of the preceding day, and his back creaked and groaned with every move He was in no mood to stand the old man's interruptions and he scowled blackly as he caught sight of the nuisance meandering toward him.

"He said to throw lower I'd better, for safety's sake," thought Jim, handling the iron more cautiously "What's the matter with him anyway?" as once more he narrowly escaped hitting him "What's the idea? Do you want to get hit?"

"You are James Lawrence, ain't you? And you come into a fortune of $3,000,000 in a year or so, don't you?"

"What's that to you?"

"If I had the courage to let you hit me—say, break my leg or such like, I could sue you for $50,000 couldn't I? And you would have to pay."

"Well of all the— "

"I'm an old man, and this job of sorting iron ain't no plum pudding. There's easier ways to get rich—"

"But not through me," declared Jim "I'm going to tie you up for the rest of the day to insure my not hitting you"

The Editor, Kingston Freeman,

Dear Sir

Thank you for your editorial "Shifting Tyranny;" that warning and the letter of your correspondent last winter on "Federal Bayonets," I think are very timely.

"Too Many Critters Feeding At the Public Crib" is a good warning to go with the others The other day while waiting at a window to pay my taxes to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts it seemed to be the unanimous verdict of the little group of us waiting at the window to cash in

As a native of Ulster and a graduate of one of the finest Agricultural Colleges in the country I am seriously beginning to ask myself if, in some of their wide spread endeavors, they have not ceased to function?

What would that Vermont farmer boy and Merchant Senator Justin S Morrill think of them today?

RONDOUT LODGE, NO. 348, NAMES REMOVAL COMMITTEE

Most Recent May Cause Masonic Bodies To Go Uptown.

Rondout Lodge, No. 348, F. & A. M., and Rondout Commandery, No. 52, K. T., are considering changing their place of meeting from the corner of Broadway and East Strand to Masonic Hall on Wall street. Monday evening Rondout Lodge, No. 348, F. & A. M., appointed a committee of five to wait upon Kingston Lodge, No. 10, and confer upon the proposition made by the uptown lodge offering the downtown body the use of its lodge rooms. The committee is to make a report back within three weeks time as to the outcome of the conference. Each member of the downtown lodge will also be given an opportunity to vote upon the question of whether it was more desirable to remain in the present location or to accept the offer of Kingston Lodge.

Rondout Commandery will vote on the proposal in the near future.

There was no degree work Monday evening at the downtown lodge, and after the business session a smoker and social hour was enjoyed. Wesley Waterbury, the newly elected master of the lodge, and the other recently elected officers, presided for the first time this year.

THE OFFICE CAT

By Junius

The young people were enjoying a motor ride and had just entered a country road.

"May I kiss your hand?" he asked, a little confusedly.

She removed her motor veil.

"No," she replied. "I have my gloves on."

Oh, Boy!

The Office Cat, Hortense, is a savage animal. It licks itself every time it eats.

Lips that touch liquor shall never be allowed in my cellar.—New York Mail.

Fatty stopped in front of a haberdasher's display window. I asked him if he was thinking of buying a shirt or pajamas or something, and he sighed when he said:

"Gosh, no! The only thing that fits me ready made is a handkerchief."

Some men never seem to want to be at home when the preacher calls.

Lazy people eat hash because it saves chewing.

When an Arkansas girl was sent home from school for powdering her nose, her father went straight to a lawyer and sued the school board. It's a shame the way some school boards stand in the way of higher education.

The most encouraging note in the present situation is the one that is stamped paid.

A domestic scientist sues a milk company for publishing over her name an inaccurate waffle recipe. The inclusion of plaster paris was a bit unfortunate.

That soap is good to eat is the latest discovery of a certain noted scientist, which, no doubt, accounts for the chap who is always bubbling over with good nature.

A "balanced diet" may sound confusing to many people

The facts, as explained here, are simple.

The secret of a "balanced diet" is to have food containing all the elements needed for proper nutrition. These elements are protein, to nourish the tissues; starch and sugar to furnish energy; fat to supply heat; and mineral salts to provide the material necessary for building nerves, brain, and tooth and bone structure.

Grape-Nuts, the nourishing cereal made of whole wheat flour and malted barley, served with cream or milk, is a complete food for young and old alike.

Go to your grocer today and get a package of Grape-Nuts. Eat it with milk or cream for breakfast; or with stewed fruit, jelly or jam, as a delicious dessert for lunch or dinner.

Every member of the family will relish this palatable and nourishing food—

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT, 1921, BY THE NEW REPUBLIC, INC.

COUNTRY CHRISTMAS

"It makes no difference to me," said Santa Claus to his dog Boy of the North, whether they are in the city or in the country.

I go to both the villages and the cities and the places far out in the country. I will admit, though, that I think the country is lovelier at Christmas time than the city.

To be sure, there are wonderful toy stores in the cities but the people in the stores told me a long time ago they liked to have it that way.

"'You see,' they told me, 'we haven't the beautiful snow banks and the wonderful Christmas look that the country has, so we like to make up for it as well as we can.

"Will you help us, Santa Claus?'

'So I promised them that I would and of course I always have.

"I try to have as gay decorations as possible in their stores and to make everything look just like Christmas.

'For in the country it somehow looks so much more like Christmas with the greens and the snow and everything so close at hand to help decorate with.

"Then fireplaces are so cosy and nice to sit around before Christmas when the children are writing their letters to me.

"I've always found, too, that people were very careful to have their fires go quite out before it was time for me to come down the chimney.

"Or they have had an extra chimney for me to come down.

"Santa Claus knows how to get down all chimneys. But still I am fond of big old-fashioned kinds of chimneys.

"What a time I had at first getting used to those fire escapes they have in the cities.

"But I got used to them all right. Still I do enjoy a nice big chimney. Yes, I most certainly do enjoy that.

Now Santa Claus was in the country. He had a few more cities to visit, too, but he was enjoying his talk with the reindeer while they were dashing through a long distance of country where scattered here and there were some farm houses where children lived.

"To be sure, there are some places which I visit where there isn't any snow at all.

"I should be used to them by this time,' Santa continued, "but they all seem strange to me, for I'm so much more used to the snow and the cold weather.

'And then we have to use the hard-ground sleigh, don't we, my lovely reindeer.'

The reindeer all understood, for when they came to the place where there was no snow Santa Claus always put on the sleigh what he called his hard ground runners.

"A Nice Big Chimney."

They were for the places where the snow-runners would not do.

Oh yes, Santa Claus had spent time in his work shop a long long time before, fixing up the sleigh for such places.

"I must sing a song about the snow and the country," Santa said.

So, as the reindeer hurried, scurried, scampered along, Santa Claus sang, and his voice rang out in the cold clear air of the night. This was his song.

"Merrie Christmas, this I say,
Christmas is my favorite day!
I am happy as can be
That the children care for me!
I make toys to please them all
I make trains and many a ball
I make dollies that can talk
And dollies that can walk
Dollies also made to hug
Which will look so very snug
When they're held and rocked to sleep
Now I will take a little peep
At the girls and boys tonight!
And I'll whisper, 'You're all right
I love you all—yes! Every one!'"

And Santa Claus sang as they went from house to house on Christmas Eve and the sleigh bells made music for Santa's song.

Admirable.

"How did you get on with spelling?" Harry's mother asked him after his first day at school. "You look so pleased that I'm sure you did well."

"No, I couldn't spell much of anything," admitted Harry, "and I couldn't remember the arithmetic very well, nor the geography."

The mother showed her disappointment but Harry had consolation in reserve.

"But that's no matter, mother," he said, "the boys admire me, they say I've got the biggest foot in the class!"

Photography.

Photography was invented in 1802 by Thomas Wedgewood, by whom photographs were produced; and the process was perfected in 1841. In the meantime, in 1839, Daguerre and Niepar invented the process of making daguerreotypes by the use of the "dark room" process.

GAS BUGGIES—That's going just a little bit too far

The KITCHEN CABINET

Copyright, 1921, Western Newspaper Union

It costs a lot to live these days, more than in days of yore
But when we come to think of it it's worth a good deal more.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

A few pieces of nicely smoked trout added to a potato salad give a flavor that is especially appetizing.

Sweet Potatoes, Southern Style.—Cook the potatoes in their skins until soft. Cut them, after peeling, in rather thick slices and lay them in a greased baking dish, sprinkling with sugar and adding butter to each layer. Bake half an hour in a slow oven and serve from baking dish. Placing a marshmallow on top of each slice and letting it puff and brown, makes a more attractive dish.

Chestnut Dessert.—Take a pound of chestnuts, cut a slit across the top of each, then drop them into boiling water to cover, boil for five minutes, then peel them. Put two cupfuls of hot water into a pan, add one cupful of sugar and the thinly pared peeling from a lemon, bring to the boiling point and add the nuts and cook until tender. Take them out of the syrup, pound them and rub through a sieve. Whip one cupful of cream, add one-half teaspoonful of lemon extract, a little red coloring the chestnut puree and enough of the syrup to sweeten. Heap in a pretty dish and serve with wafers.

Corn Pudding.—Open a can of corn and let it air an hour before using. Beat three eggs, add a pint of rich milk, the corn, one tablespoonful of melted butter, salt, pepper, and one half teaspoonful of mustard with three teaspoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce. Cook until the mixture is firm.

Sponge Bananas.—Cover the bottom of a baking dish with small sponge cakes, cover with a layer of bananas, sprinkle with sugar and the juice of a lemon, add chopped nuts, or cocoanut and bake fifteen minutes. Serve with a custard or thick cream.

Coffee Custard, Parisian.—Cook four tablespoonfuls of coffee in a pint of milk five minutes, strain through a jelly bag, add the yolks of four eggs beaten, a cupful of sugar and cook until smooth and thick. Cool, add one-third of an ounce of softened gelatin and a pint of whipped cream. Stir and stand in a cold place for an hour before serving.

PALENTOWN

Palentown, Jan. 9.—The Rev. Mr. Thomson of Olive Bridge called on Mr. and Mrs. Dymond. They are sick this winter. Their friends wish that they will soon be on the gain.

George Gray called on John Traver last Thursday. John accompanied him home to fix his car.

Mrs. Mary Browers has returned home from her visit with Mrs. Krom at Ashokan.

Miss Jennie Gray has employment at Kingston.

Homer Traver and John Ingalls from Madalin spent Tuesday and Wednesday with his family at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. William Dymond, Jr. spent Thursday evening with John Traver and his mother, Mrs. H. Traver.

The hop was well attended at Mr. Clark's Hall on Tuesday night at Samsonville.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Penney from Kingston, Mrs. Jesse Shurter and children from Samsonville spent New Years day with their mother Mrs. H. Traver at this place.

Hazel Keator and Lily Keator and Kenneth Brooks from Sundown, spent Monday evening with Mildred Traver. Their time was spent in coasting, waltzing and playing the grafonola.

Mathew Dymond is working for John Traver, cutting timber.

The New York parties which bought the Edwin Palen farm, have sold their stock and they are again back to the city.

Shoe Lore.

Many superstitions are connected with the shoe; for instance, it is thought unlucky to put either shoe on the wrong foot. Because Augustus Caesar was nearly assassinated by a mutiny one day when he put on his left shoe first, a saying has arisen that the right "shoe" must be put on first unless its owner wishes to court misfortune. Pythagoras, old Greek sage, told his disciples to put their left foot into their baths first. In Anglo-Saxon marriages the father-in-law gave the bride's shoe to the bridegroom who touched her on the head with it to denote his lordly authority.

WISE PROVISION OF NATURE

Eyesight Becomes Adapted to What Is Most Fitting to Observe, in One's Environment.

We never see everything that is about us, and no two of us ever see precisely the same things. Each sees what his previous training and his habit of mind have prepared him to see. When an American scientist was in Patagonia he fell in with a card player who told him that always after the first few rounds of the game he knew some of the cards as they were dealt; he recognized them by a difference so slight that another man could not detect it when it was pointed out to him.

Now the scientist mentioned is an ornithologist, and he says that this same prenaturally sharp-eyed man was greatly surprised when he was told that half a dozen kinds of sparrows were feeding and singing about the house. He had never seen any difference in them, he said. In size, color, shape and actions they were all alike, and they all sang and twittered alike, so far as he had ever noticed.

Native Patagonians, like other savage peoples, have very keen eyes for certain things, things which their modes of life have made it indispensable that they should notice. In other words, they are specialists, and as a matter of course they excel in their own particular line. But it does not follow that they have better eyes than are possessed by men of civilized countries.

Set them to find a reversed "s" in the middle of a printed page, and the tears would run down their brown cheeks and they would give up the search with aching eyeballs. But the proofreader can find the reversed letter in a few moments, and never strain his eyes in the least.—New York Herald.

Cuckoo Film.

A remarkable film was shown recently at the New Gallery Kinema by Mr. Edgar Chance, the well-known ornithologist, showing the actual process gone through by a cuckoo in the matter of laying its eggs in the nests of other birds. The actual taking of the film followed four years of close study, and was described by Viscount Grey, who was present at the first exhibition, as a wonderful achievement and a real contribution to bird knowledge.

Mr. Chance explained that the cuckoo favors the nests of the meadow pipits or titlarks, the theory being that the bird selects the same species as that by which she was reared.

The film shows that the cuckoo takes out one of the original eggs in her beak and, leaving her own egg, flies to a neighboring tree, there to consume the stolen property. The film then goes on to show the cuckoo fledgling monopolizing the situation in the nest, throwing out any unhatched eggs and other fledglings and thus securing for itself all the sustenance that the foster parents are able to supply.

Anticipate Cheap Steel.

The cheapest steel in the world, it is believed, will be produced in India now that "The United Steel Corporation of India, Ltd.," has been formed with a capital of twenty crores of rupees ($100,000,000) by Messrs. Bird & Company, of Calcutta, and Messrs. Cassell, Laird & Company. This event, it is said, is of great importance to the future of the iron and steel industry in the East, it being proposed to establish works on a large scale near the deposits of iron, coal, and limestone in India. Plans of the new works are well advanced. The plant is designed to produce 600,000 to 700,000 tons of pig iron, and the steel works and rolling mills are capable of producing 450,000 tons of finished steel per annum.

Enterprising Californians.

An enterprising citizen of Los Angeles not long ago started a little scheme whereby persons in other states and cities could, without leaving home, give their friends the impression that they were visiting the city of angels and movie millionaires. And this was the scheme: For 25 cents he would send any one ten postcard views of his home town. These the recipient was to address, sign and cover with messages, and return to him with the amount necessary for mailing them. The plan worked beautifully. As a result, persons in other tourist centers, including San Francisco, New Orleans, Miami and Palm Beach, have imitated it.—New York Evening Post.

Belated Love Letters.

The old postmaster at the little town of Ford, Kan., died recently, after many years' services. When postal inspectors checked up, a mass of undelivered mail was found. Stored away in old boxes were thousands of letters, some posted over fourteen years ago. Many to whom mail was addressed are now dead. From the mass of undelivered mail matrons with families received love letters from swains of a decade ago. Married men also are receiving ancient epistles filled with "sweet nothings."—Utica Globe.

His Version.

Little Dick was a loyal Notre Dame fan, so when that team recently played Indiana, Raymond G. Fox took him and his own little son to the station to see the team and then to the Claypool hotel, where followers of both teams were assembled. In telling his mother about it he said:

"You know, mother, there were about 500 people in the lobby and some one said everybody take off your hats for Indiana, and only about eighty-nine did it."—Indianapolis News.

Many Bug Varieties.

We have in the United States a long list of insects we usually designate as beetles, says the American Forestry Magazine. There are some fifteen thousand different kinds of them, and they range in size all the way from little ones that it almost requires the use of a microscope to see, to such giants as the Spotted Horn beetle.

Traced Through Correspondence.

Lawyers and others whose business it is to find missing heirs to unclaimed fortunes declare that women are much more difficult to trace than men, owing to their change of name at marriage. They are, however, more ready to keep up correspondence with girl friends of their youthful days, and they often have cause to bless those old remembrances.

The Poet's Business.

The duty of the poet is like unto that of the naturalist; it is to pursue and capture those rare specimens of thought that have hitherto escaped the hunter's net; incase in crystal-clear diction these captive beauties of nature; and offer them, 'mid the wild-flowers of their native haunts, for the admiration, reverence and love of all mankind.

Few Gas Blowers Now.

A great many glass articles and particularly the finer grade commodities are blown by hand. In the past the glass blower was an essential and an indispensable employee in the glass plant, but today he has lost a great deal of his importance. The lung power of the blower is being replaced more and more by compressed air in the glass-blowing machine.

Vienna Spades Are Trumps.

Food shortage in Austria has stimulated the cultivation of city gardens. In 1915 10,000 families were developing a total of 304 acres in small gardens in Vienna. The number had increased to 18,000 families, tilling a total of 1,432 acres in 1918, while in 1921 in Vienna there are 75,000 families cultivating the city gardens, the total acreage of the year being 5,430.

Keep a Scrapbook.

The habit of reading with a pair of scissors close at hand is an invaluable one to the busy housewife. So often there are recipes, household hints and other odd bits of information that would prove useful, but we have lost account of what or where they are. In every kitchen there should be a scrapbook for such items as these and the more methodically they are arranged the more useful they will be.

THE FREEMAN'S CENT-A-WORD ADLETS SAVE MONEY, TIME AND WORRIMENT—PUT YOUR "WANTS" UP TO THE LITTLE HUSTLERS

Anna Rinear and Merton Burke Wed.

Anna Marie Rinear, 13 years, and her beau, Merton Burke, 14 years, of Sylvania, Ohio, a suburb of Cincinnati, returned to their homes after being away on their elopement for a week. They left their home on a brand new bicycle that Merton has received for Christmas; the young miss riding on the handlebars. By this method they reached Findlay, where Merton sold his $50 bike for $25 and then they traveled by trolley to Dayton. From Dayton they traveled to Sadieville, Kentucky. By this time the papers had a story of their disappearance, with an accurate description of the pair, and this was their undoing. They visited a store to purchase some food, and the storekeeper suspected them of being the pair. He measured them with a yardstick, and then they gave up. He turned them over to a deputy sheriff, who notified the parents. They were put up at a private home over night, and the following morning an auto, with Anna's uncle, came and brought them back home.

George W. Pepper

George Wharton Pepper, noted constitutional lawyer, of Philadelphia, who was appointed by Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania to the United States senate as successor to the late U. S. Senator Boies Penrose. The new senator is 55 years old and extremely popular in eastern Philadelphia. He attained national prominence as defense counsel for organized baseball against the defunct Federal League.

Familiar "Ants' Eggs" Not Eggs.

"Ants' eggs" are familiar to many, either through having purchased them to feed goldfish or having seen them when an ant nest has been dug up in the course of gardening operations. People have called them ants' eggs, but for an ant to lay an egg as large as itself would be rather too much to expect of it. The life history of ants is similar to that of silkworms. Starting from the true egg, which is very small and in entire proportion to the size of the laying insect, it on being hatched yields a tiny grub. These are nursed and fed by the females and neuters, the latter forming a majority of the inhabitants of a nest. After attaining full size the grub spins a white cocoon around itself and changes into a pupa. It is these pupae which one has purchased as ants' eggs.

Dog's Relations With Man.

The difficulties of teaching an old dog new tricks have been crystallized into a well-nigh universal expression among all peoples. Rover must have begun his relations with man as a puppy, and not as an old dog. Plain traces of these relations are to be found in the relics of every ancient civilization or near civilization. Sculptures of dogs are to be seen in Roman, Assyrian and Egyptian antiquities. The Eskimos pay the dog—or themselves—the compliment of believing that they are its descendants. The welcome that Ulysses' dog gave its master on his return from his wanderings shows that in the oldest recorded time the genus Canis played an important part in the affairs of men.—Svetozar Tonjoroff in the Boston Herald.

Training Bull Fighters.

Bull fighting as a sport is so important a part of life in Spain that a school in a Madrid suburb is devoted to training young toreadors and matadors in the dangerous art. The apparatus used consists of a massive block of wood roughly shaped like the head and shoulders of a bull equipped with real horns, and mounted on a pair of rubber-tired wire wheels. By means of a handlebar at the rear, the instructor plunges this formidable machine toward the student, who must learn to avoid the menacing horns while making effective use of his lances. Swinging quickly on its light carriage, the mechanical bull makes a most realistic imitation of an enraged animal.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

With this very constipating diet—yet no constipation

Under the supervision of a leading scientist a remarkable feeding experiment was made. For one whole month men and women were given eggs, milk, cheese—all constipating foods—and yet they did not suffer from constipation because they added Fleischmann's Yeast to their diet.

When they ate the same constipating diet without Fleischmann's Yeast as a corrective, all four were constipated.

Thousands of men and women all over the country have found that eating Fleischmann's Yeast daily gives them normal and regular elimination. Fresh yeast is rich in the elements which increase the action of the intestines and keep the body clean of poisons.

Add 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast to your own daily diet. You'll soon find that laxatives are unnecessary. Be sure it's Fleischmann's Yeast—the familiar tin-foil package with the yellow label. Place a standing order with your grocer.

FRENCH AND GERMAN BRIDES SING DEFIANCE

Colonel in Charge of Transport With U. S. Soldiers Says It's a Hard Life.

Six hundred and two soldiers of the army of occupation arrived at New York recently on the army transport Cantigny, which docked at Pier 2, army base, South Brooklyn. Of this number 75 had contracted wives. There were 12 French brides, 63 German brides and 36 babies. The French women and German women hated each other on sight. It was an interesting voyage, and it is remarkable that no one was hurt.

The entire trip was just one patriotic song after another. As soon as the French women found they were to be associated with Germans they started to sing the "Marseillaise," just to see what the effect would be and to show how they felt about it. The result was a burst of "Die Wacht am Rhein." There and then Col. G. L. Cress, troop commander, began to devote himself to the maintenance of peace.

So the voyage resolved itself into a song fight. Every time a French bride and a German bride met there was sure to be singing of a patriotic sort. They would cast mean looks at each other for a time and then, as an outlet for their boiling emotions, would come a couple of national anthems.

The tumult was especially concerted at meal times, when "The Star-Spangled Banner" would be thrown in for good luck, and half a dozen American nurses with Irish proclivities would chime in thereafter with "Ireland must be free." Then the 36 babies would begin to cry, and 36 fathers would begin to swear.

The baby chorus was all German. The wailers were big, fat youngsters with red cheeks and powerful lungs. The French brides did not have even a single baby.

According to the soldiers, the attitude of the brides is typical of the French and German nations. They said that Germany harbored no animosity toward England and America, but that she still hated France, and France returned the sentiment.

HUMAN HAIR IN CARGO

There Is Great Scarcity of This Article in Demand in the U. S.

An item in the cargo of the Hakata Maru which arrived at Seattle recently was 40 bales of human hair. There is a great scarcity of this article and a demand for it in the manufacture of hair nets. The United States annually imports hair to the value of more than $500,000.

Human hair 25 to 35 inches long and packed in bales of 133 pounds is worth $210 in Hongkong and twice as much in this land.

It is said there are immense stores of this article held in China, as it accumulated four or five years ago following the edict regarding the abolition of the queue. Many of the long braids of black strong hair were laid away as relics, but the bulk of the clippings found their way into the hands of jobbers, who are now marketing it in this country.

Minnesota Massacre in 1862.

The Minnesota massacre occurred in 1862. In 1851 the Sioux Indians had sold the greater part of Minnesota. There was some delay in the government's fulfillment of the terms of the treaty, and the Indians became dissatisfied. This led to a massacre of settlers at Spirit Lake, on the Minnesota-Iowa border, in 1857. This massacre was followed by the rising of 1862, in which nearly one thousand settlers were killed. Gen. Henry Hastings crushed the outbreak and hung 39 of the Indian warriors from the same scaffold. The result was the expulsion of the Sioux from Minnesota. The scene of the Indian hangings is now one of the places of interest in the city of Mankato, Minn., and is known as Sibley park, named in honor of General Sibley.

Locomotives and Fuel.

An ordinary passenger locomotive consumes a pound of fuel for every 32 feet it travels. Each unnecessary stop, made with a heavy freight or passenger train, represents a fuel loss of from 300 to 700 pounds of coal, depending on the weight of the train, the length of the stop, and the grade conditions. A brake-free air leak on a train of 50 freight cars has been known to cause a loss of as much as 2,540 pounds of coal in a ten-hour period. The loss of coal each time a modern locomotive pops off for five minutes is about 75 pounds. If locomotive firemen were to save a little more than one shovelful of coal out of each ton used, the total saving would be equal to nearly 1 per cent of all the coal handled.—World's Work.

Morals in Government.

My own deliberate opinion is that the more of pure moral principle is carried into the policy and conduct of a government, the wiser and more profound will that policy be. If it is not the uniform course of human events that virtue should be crowned with success, it is at least the uniform will of Heaven that virtue should be the duty of man. The path of virtue is, indeed, not always clear, and in the complication of human affairs artifice and stratagem itself must occasionally be practised. But it may, I believe, be laid down as a universal maxim that fraud is never justifiable to effect the same object. Fraud is, therefore, a weapon essentially belonging to the relations of war.—John Quincy Adams.

The American Legion

COMMANDER WELL KNOWN

C. B. Cunningham of Kirkpatrick, Wash., Was President of I. W. W. Activities of Legion Man.

One of the best-known men in the country in I. W. W. and other radical circles is the new commander of the Legionnaires' Hospital at Washington. He is C. B. Cunningham, Coldwater.

The nation was shocked on the first anniversary of Armistice day by the shooting by radicals in Centralia of four American Legion men who were participating in the parade. Firing from vantage points on the route veterans marchers, the I. W. W. slaughtered four upright, wounded others and took to flight. Cunningham was one of the leaders of the chase which captured Wesley Everest, ringleader of the radicals. The state named to Cunningham as special prosecuting attorney in the ensuing trials of the murderers.

In the court proceedings, which held the attention of America for eight weeks, Cunningham was pitted against the best legal talent that the national organization of the I. W. W. could muster. Cunningham was victor, however. The radicals were convicted and a year later Cunningham won again, when the Supreme court upheld the verdicts.

During the war Cunningham served as an infantry private at Camp Pike, Ark.

HOW THE SERVICE MEN STAND

Checking Up at Washington by Legion Reveals That Many Members Are in Limelight.

When President Harding replied to Representative Lemuel Jeffers, Alabama, and the legislative committee of the American Legion that there were no ex-service men of outstanding qualifications to be members of the American commission to the international disarmament conference, there was a checking up in Washington to determine how service men stand in the eyes of the American electorate.

A statement later issued by the Legion showed that the President appointed an ex-service man as secretary of the navy and another assistant secretary. His alien property custodian was in service during the war. The assistant postmaster general is an ex-service man. An A. E. F. veteran is head of the national budget. The President confided the task of organizing the new veterans' bureau to a former soldier.

The public has elected 26 men who served either in the army or the navy to the house of representatives and two to the senate. In nearly a dozen states service men are the governors. Eight members of Secretary Hoover's national committee on unemployment are ex-service men.

HELPS TO FIND EMPLOYMENT

Arthur Woods, Head of Hoover Special Committee, Proves Aid to Ex-Service Men.

Ex-service men throughout the country have benefited largely from the operations of Secretary Hoover's committee on unemployment. The former soldiers and sailors have had a special friend at court in Arthur Woods, New York, head of the Hoover special committee which has co-ordinated the nation wide effort to provide jobs for the jobless.

As a special assistant secretary of war in 1919, Mr. Woods rendered distinguished service in organizing and directing a national bureau for the establishment in civil life of service men. In that work he built up an organization whose activities encompassed the nation and proved his ability to get on with and understand men. Mr. Woods formerly was police commissioner of New York, and was the first chairman of the American Legion's national Americanism commission.

The Modern Fourth.

Here is a page from the diary of a boy of today:

"Today is the Fourth of July, once a glorious patriotic holiday. In the morning I took a bath and after dinner pa told me stories about Abraham Lincoln. After supper I had to stay in while ma read Lorado Taft's Bible and then we all rose and sang 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' Then I went to bed."—American Legion Weekly.

Thirsty a Difference.

"John, John!" whispered Mrs. Oldcastle. "Wake up! I'm sure there are robbers in the house." "Robbers in the house!" he muttered sleepily. "Absolutely preposterous. There may be robbers in the county, dear, but not in the house. Absurd!"—American Legion Weekly.

LEGION GUEST AND HIS IDEA

M. Charles Bertrand of France Plans Association of Veterans to Preserve World Peace.

An association of men of all countries who fought with the Allies against Germany in the great alliance unit to preserve world peace is planned by M. Charles Bertrand, member of the French chamber of deputies and president of the Inter-Allied Veterans' Federation. Bertrand came to America with Marshal Foch as a special guest of the American Legion.

More than [illegible] veterans have been mobilized under the leadership of the inter-allied federation, and a meeting of the allied soldiers of all countries will be held in Paris next. Representing American ex-service men, the Legion will send a strong representation to the conference.

Bertrand served as an infantryman in the French army from the beginning of the war to its close. He was wounded several times and severally gassed, and his company was replaced with fresh drafts on thirty different occasions, so decimated was it in the fierce engagements into which it was thrown. The senator likewise is head of the French veteran society made up exclusively of men wounded in action.

In the formation of the inter-allied veterans' association, Bertrand has made frequent trips to Italy, England, Roumania and other allied countries. On his first trip to the United States he was the only civilian in the distinguished company of Marshal Foch, Admiral Beatty, General Diaz and Gen. Baron Jacques to receive the American Legion's gold medal for distinguished service.

SCHEMES TO COLLECT DUES

Novel Methods Are Being Employed to Induce Legion Members to Pay 1922 Assessment.

Novel means employed by American Legion posts to get in membership dues early in 1922 are causing comment in every community where a post is located, according to reports to Legion national headquarters in Indianapolis.

Around the top of the list is the story from South Dakota. A post in offering each service man who pays his dues before a set date a biscuit baked by the newest bride in the post women's auxiliary. Three of the biscuits being distributed contain cash prizes in coin—$20, $10 and $5 in gold. The biscuits may not be broken open until the night of the post banquet when they will serve as cards of admission. Early recipients of biscuits declared they could not judge from their weight whether they contained gold pieces or bricks.

Out in Kansas a post gave its finance officer carte blanche in collecting 1922 dues early. A few mornings later Legionnaires were being routed out of bed at 4 a. m. by members of the committee who refused to let the slumberer go back to bed until he had paid up. The various state departments of the Legion are in a hot contest for the honor of being the first to send in the complete dues of the membership.

WILL HELP CHEER UP BOYS

Miss Rita Gould, Vaudeville Star, Offers Her Services to the American Legion.

"The boys need a little cheer now just as much as they did when they were in France, homesick, cold and miserable. I'll do my share," said Miss Rita Gould of the vaudeville stage in offering her services to the American Legion. During the war Miss Gould spent the period of America's participation in visiting the various A. E. F. billeting areas, staging entertainments for the soldiers.

After she had passed most of last summer in government hospitals and recreation camps entertaining sick and wounded men, Miss Gould informed the legion that on her theatrical tour of the winter she would give her services free to legion posts in all the towns she visits. Many posts are availing themselves of the opportunity to have a stage star feature their amateur theatricals for the benefit of needy and disabled service men.

Asking Too Much.

"I don't want to eat this egg. It's not a nice egg," protested the six-year-old daughter of the house at the breakfast table.

"'Mary,' said her mother sternly, 'you are always complaining of your food. But what is placed before you—every bite of it—without another word, or else I'll have to give you a good spanking.'

All was quiet for some minutes. Then from the other end of the table sounded a mournful voice.

"Mother, dear, do I have to eat the beak too?"—American Legion Weekly.

Evolution of Familiar Word.

The finding of the term "pocket-handkerchief" records some somewhat primitive facts. At first it was described as facetsnet (snuff-chief), a something for the head carried in the hand, and at length pocket-handkerchief, a covering for the head kept in the hand until kept in the pocket.

EXPLORER PLANNED SKY SIGN

London Newspaper Complains of Dazzling Electric Advertisements as Spoiling City's Beauty.

The London Observer ventures to register a grand-stained protest against "the terrible affliction of the jazz luminaries" that shout their advertisements from every corner of the London streets when darkness comes. The combustible effect of these flashing electric signs is as distressing as a "vertical vaudeville" with a magnesium.

"The biggest street corner of Piccadilly circus is the habitat of the worst offenders. It is ablaze with flaming invaders, so that it looks like a house on fire. 'The galaxy of reminded lettering given you the blinks. Leicester square has a green river of tears flowing about a safety razor advertisement."

In Switzerland, the Observer comments, they do things differently—or did, before the war. In Zurich the citizens sit by their swift-flowing Limmat and watch the shimmer of water under the stars or moon, while the venerable outlines of the old minster loom dark against the sky. Paris, indeed, has lost her old-time hegemony as the city of light. That primacy has now passed to New York, with London a close second.

"Some, perhaps, would rather be left to dream of that other Georgian London, haunted by watchmen with dim-wits and lanthorns, or the Elizabethan one, peopled by gallants with ruff, doublet, jerkin, and smoking torches. The soap, baby food and whisky they prefer to encounter in newspapers, where the mere sight of it does not occasion a kind of visual delirium tremens."—The Living Age.

HAVE NEW IDEA OF MARRIAGE

Public Discussion of the Subject in the Japanese Press Is Regarded as Significant.

A series of articles on love and marriage is appearing in Japanese newspapers and magazines, as a sign of the modern tendencies of the Japanese mentality. Professors in psychology, school teachers and writers of note are prominent in the discussion on reforming the old matrimonial system, all advocating more freedom for personal choice.

According to the old custom, the parents chose bride and bridegroom and the marriage was performed without the interested parties having known each other. Marriage was considered a duty towards country and family, the religion of ancestor worship being its principle. The young couples lived with the parents and the bride owed complete obedience to her mother-in-law.

The custom is now prevalent for the young people to meet long before the marriage takes place so that they may know each other, and to live apart from the family is no longer considered undutiful. Yet, of late, the tendency appeared to marry for love's sake and out of personal choice. This new and romantic ideal is so strong that all means are tried to obtain it, entailing elopements, suicides and notorious family dissensions. Hence the discussion for greater liberty and more social life, which are quite opposed to the old social system of Confucius, that men and women should keep apart and marry for duty's sake and not for love.

Hard Names to Pronounce.

The new frontier which has been drawn up in Upper Silesia will affect the place names of a number of cities more or less familiar to the American public. Of the larger cities, Ratibor (Raciborz in Polish), Gleiwitz, (Gliwice) and Beuthen (Bytom) will retain their present German names. On the Polish side the place names of towns which, while they have all along been known to the Poles by their original Polish names, have for the last two centuries officially borne German names, will now revert to the Polish forms. Thus Konigshutte again is Huta Krolewska, Kattowitz again becomes Katowice, Pless is changed back to Pszczyna, Tarnowitz will again be Tarnowskie Gory, and once more Lublinitz will be known as Lublinitec. The place name of Rybnik will remain unchanged, the Polish and German forms being identical.

Flirtatious Islands.

French grammar is right, for once when it designates islands as feminine: many of them appear and disappear like a face behind a fan, and have to be wooed fervently before they are won.

Charcot's recent landing on the "lost" island of Rockall, east of the Hebrides, recalls other elusive islands, says the Scientific American. Jan Mayen modestly veils herself in mist and is seen but once in 50 years, while an islet in the Behring straits surrounds herself with water so hot that fishermen say approach is impossible. Derwentwater has a bathing nymph of an island that floats for six weeks, then coyly submerges. Lenge, the explorer, made his home on a similar one at the mouth of the Amazon, until the island capsized in an attempt to get rid of her guest.

Big Nova Scotian Industry.

The iron and steel industry of Nova Scotia centers about Cape Breton island and the county of Pictou, where coal deposits are available and the necessary ores most easily imported. Apart from this area the principal industrial points are Halifax, Dartmouth, Truro, Amherst and New Glasgow.

"Polite" Characteristic.

The word "polite," which was applied as a nickname to the French soldier during the World war, means hairy or shaggy, and is generally used in that country to denote a man of strength and character, the idea being that men with hairy faces and arms and chests are strong.

An Open Letter of Appreciation for the Unprecedented Response to Our Announcement of the New Year

MOXIE PRICE REDUCTION

To Our Millions of Friends Everywhere:

IN response to our communication of January 1, announcing a substantial price reduction, bringing Moxie "back to normalcy," you have certainly started the New Year off happily for us. The response has been universal, North, South, East and West.

To undertake to reply to this by letter, wire or 'phone is an impossible task, owing to the volume. We feel, therefore, that we must again adopt this open letter through the newspapers in order that you may be aware of our appreciation of your wonderful expression which further tends to confirm our faith in our enormous goodwill, born of the best product on earth—the standard beverage MOXIE—and of universal fair dealing for almost half a century.

Particularly gratifying is the fact that every Moxie jobbing house and retail dealer, their salesmen and employees generally, numbering, approximately 300,000, grasped the situation with enthusiasm. They all put their shoulders to the wheel and put Moxie, the standard beverage, back to normal, as it were, almost overnight—the most wonderful illustration of co-operation that was ever brought to the public attention, we believe.

Words fail to express our appreciation, but it will inspire us with all the force at our command to bigger and better efforts if possible.

THE MOXIE COMPANY.

Gold Lacquer for Metals.

Articles of white metal, such as chains, rings etc, may be made to appear like gold by this simple process. Boil one pint of water and stir into it two ounces of finely powdered sulphur. Stir well, and boil up the liquid once again. Next add one ounce of dragon's blood. Filter through a fine cloth to remove any solid matter that remains from the sulphur. The articles to be colored are placed, with the liquid, in a pan provided with a close-fitting lid and boiled for about 15 minutes, at the end of which time the objects will have taken on a fine gold color.

Basketball Badinage.

Kansas paper: "Billsburg's basketball Belles beat Burlington's basketball Beauties. Blondes, brunettes, beautifully bedizened by basques, bloomers, belts buttons. Bugle blows—bout begins— backbones bend, bodies bump, buttons burst, belts break. Boosters bellow boisterously. Beauties buffet ball briskly but bouncing Belles bear battle's brunt by busy bursts beyond blocking. Both bunches battle bravely, but Belles being better bumpers, beat Beauties badly. Bravo, Billsburg Belles, bravo!"—Boston Transcript.

Disinterested Spectators.

A suit for damages was being tried not long ago in one of the divisions of a southern city court. A country lad seventeen or eighteen years old was put on the stand to testify. He gave his testimony in so low a tone that the judge, pointing to the jury, said to him: "Speak so that these gentlemen can hear you." "Why," said the witness, with a beaming smile, "are these men interested in the case, too?"—Harper's Magazine.

Iron Is Man's Product

There is practically no iron in the world except what man has made. Gold diamonds other metals and jewels we find in the earth in nuggets or crystals but the only iron we find in such form in nature are meteorites and though we don't know where they come from to what sun or planet they belong we would not visit them if we could for where iron does not rust animal and plant life cannot live. There is no oxygen in the vast spaces between the stars.—Exchange.

Peculiar Execution

Rubberneck Wagoner—"On your right you see the tablet marking the spot where Paul Revere stood waiting for the signal to be hung in the Old North church." Sweet Young Thing—"Oh, dear what a shame! And why did they pick the Old North church to hang him in?"

Logical.

Two small boys overheard their mother say: "If tuberculous people marry, their children are always tuberculous." Later, in the nursery: "Nanny, I heard mother telling Miss Browne that if two burglars marry, their children are always two burglars. Is that true?"—London Tit-Bits.

Valuation.

"Her face is her fortune." "And yet," commented Miss Cayenne, "I shouldn't go so far as to say that the cosmetics represent an extensive investment in dyestuffs."

Who Will Invent That?

That new electric light that stays lit a minute after you turn it out is all right, but what is wanted is one for the collar that will put itself out when we forget to do it.—Boston Transcript.

"Good-by, my darling little baby brother!" Miss Anne Stillman buried her face against the rosy cheek of Baby Guy, in whose behalf his mother is now scouring the frozen Canadian wastelands. She almost smothered the youngster with kisses. Baby Guy, over whose advent into the world one of the greatest American divorce cases has been instituted, was at the pier to see his sister off on the steamship Finland. With him at the pier were his brother and staunch champion, 'Bud, and his ten-year-old brother, Alexander. Miss Stillman sailed to attend a private school at Paris, with Frances Davison, daughter of Henry P. Davison, and Alice Wodehouse. All three girls arrived here several weeks ago to attend the wedding of Miss Davison's sister, Alice.

Energy in Clouds.

A cloud, though composed of water, is so light that it floats in the atmospheric ocean. It is made up of minute globules of water, each one of which has for its nucleus a particle of dust. The weight of a cloud measuring 10,000 feet in diameter would, it is estimated, be something like 200,000 tons, if its material were condensed. The material has been lifted into the sky by the power of the sun. One may observe the process in operation when one sees a "thunderhead" cloud mounting skyward on a summer day. Its rising speed averages more than 100 feet a minute, but the cloud goes up more slowly when it reaches a point where its top is cooled to the degrees of the surrounding air. The cloud assumes varying shapes as the process then takes place. Often the top of the thunderhead bursts out in surprisingly beautiful mushroom forms and stands in the sky like a vaporous toadstool reared as if by magic.

Teach Pleasant Ways.

Quite often really well-meaning children are disliked because of their habit of saying disagreeable things, truths perhaps, but still best left unsaid. Telling truths that hurt is the very surest and swiftest way to win an enemy and lose a friend, and the mother who neglects to add this caution to her "do's" and "don'ts" is leaving an important point neglected. If there is one inalienable birthright of a child it is love, and it is almost criminal negligence upon the part of any mother who allows some disagreeable trait to flourish until it has destroyed the little one's chance for affection and tenderness at the hands of the universe that, after all, judges so much by results since it has not the time nor the patience to consider the cause.—Detroit News.

Lotus Oldtime Food.

Herodotus of Halicarnassus, in his record of travels and researches through the world of his period, wrote of the Egyptians who dwelt in the morasses as being especially fond of the lotus and they found it to be of great value as food. Herodotus wrote: "When the Nile is full and has made the plain like a sea, great numbers of lilies, which the Egyptians call 'lotus,' spring up in the water." These, according to Herodotus, they gathered and dried in the sun and "then, having pounded the middle of the lotus, which resembles a poppy, they make bread of it and bake it." The old chronicler wrote that the root of the lotus was also fit for food "and is tolerably sweet and is round and is of the size of an apple."

Discrimination.

A salesman recently told the Bow Street magistrate that no swearing is allowed nowadays in Covent Garden Market. This exclusion of all golfers, ratepayers and spring-cleaning victims is surely rather drastic.—Punch (London).

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 10.—The stock market showed a somewhat heavy tone at the beginning of business today. Baldwin Locomotive was in large supply and dropped 1 point to 93¾. U. S. Steel started ¼ higher at 82¾ and then fell to 82⅝. Crucible Steel showed a loss of ⅛ at 62¼; Atlantic Gulf was weak, dropping 1⅝ to 28¾. The railroad issues were also lower, Reading showing a loss of ⅜ at 71⅜. Mexican Petroleum was 1⅝ points lower at 107⅜. Pan American Petroleum showed a loss of 1⅛ at 49⅛. Studebaker dropped ⅛ to 80⅛. Kelly Springfield was ⅛ lower at 35⅛.

The declines which were sustained during the first half hour did not cause any special disturbance, but instead, the impression prevailed that the bulk of the selling was for short account. Before the end of the first hour a better tone developed.

Business dwindled away to small volume in the late afternoon at times dealings consisted almost wholly of operations by the speculative elements on the floor. Baldwin Locomotive yielded from 93¾ to 93. Mexican Petroleum was fairly well held ranging above 108. National Enamel dropped 1½ to 31.

The market closed strong; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds steady.

Persian "Home Brew."

The Persians claim to have originated the art of home brewing. Thirty centuries ago, according to an account King Jamshid had a great jar of grapes. Pressure of the top layers on those beneath squeezed out the juice, which fermented and became sour. One of the king's wives, having learned of the liquid in the basement which the king believed to be, and had labeled "poison," decided to use it to end her life. Although she drank freely, instead of dying she lost her despondency and became very happy. The king could not understand her sudden hilarity until she confessed. Thereafter it is related, both the monarch and his court very regularly "poisoned" themselves on home brew.

Mysterious Instinct.

Most animals, such as the fox, the wolf and the rabbit, find their way back to their homes by a combination of sight, memory and smell. There are extraordinary cases of cats, dogs and pigeons traveling over vast distances where it seems impossible for either sight or scent to be of much assistance. For instance, a terrier sent to a new home in Ohio returned to its old master in Pennsylvania, over a distance of nearly 200 miles. In all cases like these memory and sight are of hardly any use except in the immediate neighborhood of "home." Of what service can smell be when the track they traverse is new and strange?

Instinct of Birds.

There is little reason to doubt that a migrating bird knows the difference between north and south, so that when the nightjar, for instance, is leaving Africa for England, it begins its homeward journey by going due north. Now it does not follow that any nightjar ever intentionally flew straight from Africa to England. He may easily make a mistake and find himself in France. But France, being just as suited to his purposes, the matter may be settled right there and he may drop down in the woods near Paris.

PEARL FISHING IN SCOTLAND

Low Water During the Season Just Ended Brought About Many Successful "Catches."

The pearl-fishing season, which has now drawn to a close, has for many of the Scotch fishers been an extremely successful one, says Violet Raeburn in the Edinburgh Scotsman. Owing to the low volume of water in the rivers after the long drought, they have been enabled to see more easily the shells on the river bed, also to wade farther into the water. These fresh water pearls are contained, not in oyster, but in pearl-mussel shells, which are to be found in several of the Scotch rivers and streams.

The methods of fishing vary slightly. The fisher with whose method we are most familiar wears an angler's hip boots and wades far into the water. He carries in his hand a piece of corrugated iron, shaped much the same as a jug, the base of which is made of glass. This enables him to see the shells which lie at the bottom of the river. In his other hand he holds a "tongs" consisting of two pieces of wood with iron pincers.

On seeing a shell he lifts it with tongs and puts it into his pocket. Then when he has a good number of shells he opens them on the river bank to discover if he has had any luck. It may be that he will find a pearl in the first one he opens, or he may open many shells without any prize. The same shell may contain more than one pearl.

As there is a mass of water weed at the bottom of the river which prevents the shell being seen, the spring, before the weed is in full growth, and the autumn, when it is dying down, are the best times for the fishing.

RESERVOIR SITES ALONG OHIO

Government Geologic Survey Points Out Enormous Possibilities for Impounding Stores of Water.

A comparison of records of the flow of the Ohio river with those of the upper Mississippi and Missouri shows that although its drainage area is but one-third that of the combined Mississippi and Missouri its average and low-water flow is 1.3 times as great as their combined flow, and its maximum flow is 1.5 times as great. This fact is accounted for by the greater rainfall in the Ohio basin and by the general character of the region.

In the Ohio basin there are apparently many opportunities for storage, especially on the southern tributaries. On topographic maps of the geological survey that cover part of the drainage area of the Ohio a large number of reservoir sites have been located, some of them of enormous capacity, and it is believed that careful surveys would show many sites suitable for dams that would impound large quantities of water in reservoirs.

The volume of water flowing in the Ohio may perhaps be better appreciated by noting that a discharge of 300,000 cubic feet per second would in one day cover 595,000 acres to a depth of one foot.

Alsace to Have Big Show.

The city of Strasbourg, in Alsace-Lorraine, is already making preparations for a great interallied health exposition to be held in commemoration of the centennial anniversary of the birth of Louis Pasteur, discoverer of the germ origin of diseases. Following the example of the Columbian World's Fair at Chicago, which celebrated in 1893 the four hundred and ninetieth anniversary of the discovery of America in 1492, the Strasbourg exposition will be held in 1923, from May to October, although Pasteur was born in 1822.

For the first time in history Strasbourg will see an exposition arranged by citizens of France. The participation of representatives from the nations that helped to bring Alsace-Lorraine back to France will make it memorable as something more than a collection of modern methods of fighting disease.

War Mascot Dead.

The French press pays tribute to a hero of the war, whose death has just been announced. The hero in question was named Diamond, and was a cat that attached himself to the French in the lines before Amiens. Every day Diamond might be seen threading its way through the entanglements to the German front trench. The poilus were afraid that some harm might come to their mascot, and in order to protect it they tied a packet of cigarettes around its neck before it started out on its daily ramble, bearing the words: "I bring you cigarettes: do not kill me." Diamond, being a war veteran, had a right to a comfortable home when the armistice was signed, and was sent to an animals' home superintended by the Countess Turkevich at Neuilly, where it died.

Motorcycle Spray.

A farmer's motorcycle came in useful this summer. He had 500 acres planted to potatoes, and these were threatened with destruction by the potato bug. With his horse-drawn sprayer he could only cover about 85 acres a day, and in the hot weather which prevailed this would have spelled ruin to his crop. But the rancher was a resourceful soul, and he attached an insecticide-spraying outfit to the sidecar chassis of his motorcycle, utilizing the power of the machine for traction and for spraying. With this outfit he found it possible to spray 180 acres per day with paris green and so save the situation.

The Opportunity.

In this world the one thing supremely worth having is the opportunity to do worthily a piece of work, the doing of which is of vital consequence to the welfare of mankind.—Roosevelt.

TELEPHONES IN GREAT WAR

American Equipment Said to Have Been Complete Down to the Smallest Imaginable Detail.

According to the chief signal officer of the A. E. F., two armies, 12 corps, 30 divisions and 45 field signal battalions were completely equipped with telephone supplies. The signal corps constructed 1,800 miles of permanent pole lines with 28,000 miles of wire, put up 3,200 miles of wire on French poles and installed approximately 40,000 miles of combat lines.

Telephone exchanges on permanent lines in France numbered 273, and those in the advance section 123, besides small temporary field installations.

About 1,600,000 long-distance telephone calls were handled by the signal corps, together with local telephone calls estimated at 47,000,000. The organization of this system required the services of a veritable army of telephone experts, the Bell system alone having contributed 11,200 employees who served overseas. Girl telephone operators of the system to the number of 288 went to France in the uniform of the signal corps.

So completely organized was the system of telephone communications that it has been said that if he had desired to do so, General Pershing could have taken up his telephone at his headquarters in Chaumont and called up any second lieutenant, sitting at the end of a wire in an advance post, anywhere along the entire sector occupied by the American forces.

RATS CAN BE EXTERMINATED

Writer Points to the Wiping Out of the Passenger Pigeon as Proof of Assertion.

In the Book of Books we read, wonderingly, of the plagues visited on the Egyptians, says the Philadelphia North American, editorially. In the record of the centuries we find numerous references to plagues of other sort—and all the while we are entertaining—yes, supporting and encouraging—the most destructive of plagues.

In this land and throughout the world we are permitting rats to destroy property and endanger human life. The word "permit" is the only one to use, for rats and mice could be got rid of if a concerted, persistent effort were made.

Let him who doubts this possibility inquire about the passenger pigeon which, within 60 years, inhabited this country in such numbers as to actually darken the face of day in its flights—and of which not one specimen now remains.

It was easier to destroy these birds than it would be to destroy rats and mice, but the possibility of the one achievement justifies belief in that of the other. And there can be no doubting the need for this destruction.

It has been figured by experts that we have at least one rat for each of our inhabitants—that is the ratio generally accepted in such civilized countries as France, England and America. In certain parts of less civilized countries the ratio is higher.

Really Nothing to It.

The Imperial War museum, London, England, is compiling a record of slang, and will be glad to receive any notes on the subject, giving the slang terms used in the army, together with the meaning of the term, and, if possible, the derivation. It is quite understood that many of these terms are not fit for polite conversation, but at the same time it is considered that they will be valuable for record purposes.

In this connection may be told the story of the new recruit who questioned an oldtimer on the subject of the French language. Did he have any difficulty in making himself understood? None whatever, said the veteran, who was a Scotsman. For example, suppose you wanted a couple of eggs you said "twa oeufs," and the old woman would bring three (trois) whereupon you sent one back again. Quite simple!

Their Frank Opinion.

A few weeks ago my parents and I were walking in a section of a suburb in which quite a lot of building was going on. Our curiosity overcoming us, we went in one house, which was about half completed. We immediately commenced to criticise it, commenting upon its instability, the smallness of the rooms and how we would hate to live in such a house. Finally, our exploration of the first floor completed, we looked up to see if there were rooms upstairs. Imagine our chagrin when we saw a man, who we afterward learned owned the house, sitting on the rafters, painting a window sill and interestedly listening to our conversation. We fled quickly.—Chicago Tribune.

Touched Fireman's Heart.

An old mother cat got caught in an apartment house fire with her four kittens in Brooklyn. A fireman named Smith was at work in the thick of the smoke when he felt a soft and persistent rubbing against his foot. The smoke was so thick that he could not see the floor distinctly, but he bent over and found the object was a cat. She wasn't worried so much about herself, but she had her whole family—four kittens—with her in a pasteboard box which she had dragged from the flames. The trouble was that she could not get the box downstairs without spilling its contents. So Smith rescued her and the kittens, and got badly cut by broken glass in doing so.

Still More Juvenile.

A small boy, aged four, had just communicated the fact to his uncle that he had started on his school career. "Indeed," said his uncle; "why, you must be the youngest there." "Oh, no," answered the youngster in a very lofty manner, "there's another gentleman who comes in a perambulator."

ICE BY ELECTRIC PROCESS

Method, Long Tried Out in Hotels, Restaurants, and Ships, Soon to Be Universal.

Now that iceless refrigeration has been simplified to the point where it is suitable for the home, it is safe to predict that it will not be long before it will be within the reach of even those of very modest pocket books, and all need of bothering with the iceman, with his pick and tongs, will be gone.

The ice used on our tables has long been the product of electric refrigeration, although the mechanism was not located in our own homes, says Philadelphia North American. Hotels, restaurants and passenger boats have used the electric process because it is efficient, sanitary and convenient.

Electricity does not immediately and directly produce the freezing temperature, but merely provides the motive power to condense certain chemicals which are the actual refrigerants. In the process of condensation, these chemicals vaporize or "boil" and absorb the heat from the surrounding air. The machinery by which condensation and vaporization is produced was formerly large and expensive, and it has taken continuous experimentation to reduce it to a point where it is practical for household use.

The process has been similar to the transition of locomotive power from the large and clumsy railroad steam engine to the smaller automobiles, with their comparatively simple mechanism. The complex machinery had to be refined to a point where it could be produced cheaply and operate on a small scale. Electric refrigeration has now almost reached the penny class—it will soon be considered essential in all our kitchens.

PLANT INDOOR WINDOW BOX

Small Expense and Little Effort Required to Have Ornamentation Always Pleasing.

To the real garden lover the charm of the garden can be extended all through the winter months, for a window garden gives cheer to a room and is always a source of interest and delight.

Window boxes can be kept charming for the entire year by filling them with hardy begonias and ferns, suggests the Christian Science Monitor. Another interesting arrangement, all in green, is of small palms and ferns of the long-leaved Boston type, and asparagus sprengeri to trail over the edge. Primrose, the Chinese or common variety, and Irish ivies make a window box with a delightful color note. For late autumn, if the room is kept cool, some of the darling little chrysanthemums in brown and yellow are effective and they will last several weeks. For the late winter or early spring flowering bulbs may be used among ferns.

In planting a winter garden one must always remember that plants do not thrive near steam heat, and if the radiator is under the window a broad shelf should be placed six inches or more above it and the box set back on the shelf, so that the force of hot air does not come too near the foliage.

The small expense and the little effort required for a beautiful indoor window box makes it possible for every home-loving woman to have one.

Restoration Worth While.

Why build new cottages? Why not repair old ones? These were the questions asked by the Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings, in England, and answered successfully. The society took a veritable relic of old England, five centuries old if a single day, in the shape of two dwellings under one roof at Drinkstone, in Suffolk. The thick timbers, seasoned to the quality of iron, were good, but the roof, the floor and the windows were defective. In fact the building was habitable only on a portion of the ground floor. Nothing daunted, the society set to work and, by judicious restoration, made the old dwellings as sound as a bell. The total cost of the work, including the freehold site, was £3,612. A new cottage would have cost at least $4,750, not including the site. Is it any wonder that the society is casting round for other old haunts to conquer?—Christian Science Monitor.

New "Landed Gentry" in England.

The advent of a new "landed gentry" in England since the war is made plain by "Burke's," an annual work of reference on that subject which has reappeared after a break of seven years. Over 100 names of old landowners have disappeared since the last edition, and their places have been taken by double that number of newcomers. In the preface, the editor remarks: "Much as the passing of old families from the land, or the diminution of their holdings, is to be regretted, the rise of a new class of landed gentry, possessed of means enabling them to develop estates which had become impoverished through the misfortunes of their previous owners, cannot be without benefit to the country."

Long-Distance View.

Looking from one lofty mountain range across to another, enormous distances may be spanned. The record is said to be between Mount Sparta, in Mexico, and the Sierra Madre, the two ranges being about two hundred miles apart.

MARKET STALLS IN RUSSIA

Pitiful Condition of the Country Is Revealed by the Articles Offered for Sale.

The cry that Russia was wholly without needles, pins and thread was apparently without foundation. The abolition of domestic trade restrictions has produced a great quantity of such articles in Russian market stalls. They are of Russian, English, German and American manufacture. Much of this supply doubtless was hoarded and could be had secretly before free trade was inaugurated.

Darning cotton and wool, hooks and eyes, hairpins, combs, brushes, buttons and other notions also are offered freely, but at high prices in comparison with the markets of western Europe.

Cloth is scarce and apparently of inferior quality. Market stalls seldom have more than a few yards of any sort of cotton or woolen fabrics. Porcelain is also scarce.

The only really good table silver and porcelain is in the hands of hundreds of reduced gentlefolk, who stand in queues about the public markets and offer their household belongings for the rubles necessary to buy a black bread at 3,000 rubles for a Russian pound of 12 ounces. Every conceivable household article and every sort of garment can be bought in these queues.

Chairs, chandeliers, lamps, stoves, carpets, rugs, saddles, trunks, talking machines, beds, bicycles, pots, pans, kettles, table linen, fur coats, boots, evening gowns and every sort of wearing apparel are offered for sale by their owners in these queues. Endless lines of second-hand dealers and individuals requiring wares pass along these queues asking prices and offering cash or barter.—New York Tribune.

DEFINES RIGHT OF CARRIERS

Long Litigation Over Seemingly Slight Matter Really Was Matter of High Importance.

Long litigation over possession of a loaf of bread at last has confirmed the claim of a common carrier to possession of articles left behind by forgetful passengers says the New York Telegraph. By such seemingly trifling incidents are established principles of law and equity often brought to the attention of the public.

The issue grew out of the arrest of a man who picked up a package left by another passenger, on a seat of a New York subway train. The trainmaster demanded the package under the company's rule requiring all such estrays to be turned in at the office, subject to claim by the owners. Although it then was discovered that the package contained nothing more valuable than a 5-cent loaf of bread the matter went to litigation.

Through all the devious ways that such seemingly petty cases get up to the highest court, the case reached the Court of Appeals of the state. There, after as solemn deliberation as is given to issues involving large amounts of money and more momentous principles, the court held that the rule of the company was based on a well-established principle of law.

The finder could have no claim to the article as having been lost. It merely had been left by the owner on the property of the carrier, who at once became bailee for the owner. The other person, instead of acquiring any right to it as finder under the law, technically became a thief if he retained it, notwithstanding his expressed intention to advertise for the owner.

Marbles Always Spring Game.

To write the full history of marbles would involve literally the writing of volumes. For in England alone games, names, and values vary from one county to another, always, however, showing an underlying likeness like all children's games the world over. One common feature, seen everywhere, whether in the United Kingdom or the United States, is that marbles is essentially a spring game. In certain parts of England, the playing of marbles, like the playing of cricket, begins with punctilious regularity on the Friday before Easter. But generally, on the first spring days, as if by some common consent, marbles make their appearance. Mysterious little holes begin to appear in vacant places, mysterious chalk marks on pavements and sidewalks, and, before the first green has appeared in the trees, the game is in full swing, on all hands. By summer it is put away again for another year.

Floral Chimeras.

There are orchids of the tropics which exceed in strangeness of form and splendor of color anything produced in conservatories. Among the most remarkable of these plants are those belonging to the genus Masdevallia. One species closely imitates the trunk of an elephant, and is named accordingly Masdevallia elephanticeps. Another looks like a flying pigeon. The species to which the name "chimera" is specially applied is very extraordinary. With what resembles two slender legs and a flail-like trunk upraised from its head, the flower startles the beholder with its resemblance to some fantastic and monstrous insect. The resemblances of these flowers to animals are so exact that even birds are sometimes deceived by them.

Truth First in Art.

"Truth," said Corot, "is the first thing in art, and the second and the third." But the whole truth cannot be told at once. A selection from the mass of Nature's truths is what the artist shows—a few things at a time, and with sufficient emphasis to make them clearly felt. You cannot paint summer and winter on a single canvas. No two successive hours of a summer's day are just alike, as I you cannot paint them both. Nor, as certainly, can you paint everything you see at the chosen moment. Crowd in too much and you spoil the picture, weaken the impression, conceal your meaning, falsify everything in the attempt to be too true. Corot managed to paint to interpret life, mood and meaning of what he saw.—Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer.

Real Kisses by Post.

The English patent office has issued a patent on a method of sending a kiss by post. It is described thus: "A post, letter, or like card is provided with means for making an impression of the lips of the sender. The person presses a card, carrying a piece of cloth or other material covered or impregnated with a colored substance, such as bronze to the lips, and then kisses the card, leaving the impression shown." The patent does not deprive any girl of the right to kiss a card with her freshly-rouged lips and to send the card to the man of her heart. The ideal substance with which to print the kiss is a mixture of honey, gum arabic, and cochineal. This will dry on the card and the kiss will be sweet when received.

Explaining a Domestic Problem.

One reason why it is so hard for a man to make his wife pay cash is because she hasn't got it.—Galveston News.

The Flea's Fleal

A new "flea's flea" with an adventurous life history was described for the first time at a recent meeting of the Royal Microscopical society. The discoverer, Mr. F. Martin Duncan, F. R. M. S., explained that it started life in the underground nest of the humble bee. These nests are raided by moles, and during the assault the little mites attach themselves by means of suckers to the mole's paws to the "great mole flea." These tiny pin points of life are obscure cousins to the scorpion, and it is believed that they travel on the mole flea until they come across a certain underground fungus, where they feed and mature.—London Tit-Bits.

Robes Worn by Supreme Justices.

The justices of the United States Supreme court have always worn the black silk judicial gowns when on the bench. In an earlier day they used the ancient wigs, such as still persist in England. The wearing of the traditional robes is not required by law, but is a custom sanctioned from time immemorial. President Lincoln compared the justices, in their long black robes, to the long-winged black ants that used to fly out from under the bark of the logs when he was splitting rails. This comparison, it is said, made some of the justices very angry.

As He Figured It.

Donald has reached the age when his presence at social affairs is much in demand. Recently he was invited to a birthday party and mother was giving him final instructions as to etiquette. "What will you say," she asked, "if they ask you to have something that you don't like?" "I would say 'thank you,'" was the reply. "And what would you say if you did not want any?" "Well," said the young hopeful, "I would say 'No, thank you,' but I don't think I'd have to say that—perhaps I wouldn't."

Cramped.

Nervous Man—"What's the matter with you? You keep trying to run the elevator through the roof." Elevator Boy (fresh from New York)—"Sorry, sir. You see, I'm not used to those cafe to-order-every-building cars."

Ambition as Motive Power.

The right ambition can mold the nature of its mental mush. Country boys have risen to financial potentates and rail splitters to national leadership. The right mental push put energy into action when needed. Such men have left names to encourage our youth. Every youth has a right to picture himself in high station. It takes only continued effort intelligently directed to put him there. The vision of it is the first mental push toward that end. When every effort expresses the motive of the individual he will strive for the noblest conduct. That means putting the right push into the mind and developing according to the noblest purposes in life.—Grit.

MORE DETAILS IN WALDEN SHOOTING

Of Fred Harding of Ganaghote Sunday Morning Who Was Mistaken for Burglar by Moses Schoonmaker—Harding Had Gone on Drinking Bout, Then Set Out to Locate His Family.

The shooting of Fred Harding of Ganaghote on Sunday morning by Moses Schoonmaker of Walden, followed a drinking bout in which Harding participated, and which led him to pick out the wrong residence when he tried to locate his family.

Harding was former proprietor of the Ganaghote Hotel, and was instantly killed by a charge fired from a shotgun in the hands of Moses A. Schoonmaker, former Walden photographer, who mistook Harding for a burglar trying to enter his home in North Montgomery street, Walden, at 12:40 o'clock Sunday morning.

Mrs. Schoonmaker, who first heard someone trying to enter the house, had been lying awake owing to rheumatism. She told her husband of the alleged attempt to enter the door and window, but he told her there was nothing serious and to go to sleep. She insisted there was someone trying to get in and both arose and went to the front door and found Harding peering through the glass window in the door. He was warned to leave but made a further attempt to effect an entrance. A charge from the shotgun was fired by Schoonmaker over Harding's shoulders to scare him without injury. After going half way round the house Harding again returned to the front door and made a second attempt to enter. A lunge at the door by Harding brought the second shot from the gun and he fell over dead.

Harding had married Mrs. Schoonmaker's niece, but Mrs. Schoonmaker stated she was not well acquainted with him.

Harding had been in town with a load of charcoal and later had been out drinking with three men and evidently he was considerably under the influence of liquor. Being so drunk he probably thought he was at the home of William Hedden, where his wife and family were staying.

Harding and Hedden unloaded the load of charcoal at the H. E. Williams Hardware Company store, where they received $36.25 for the load, and later went to the Central House on Oak street where Hedden got Proprietor C. W. Weiss to cash the check, which was divided.

Hedden when questioned by Coroner J. F. Tucker of Newburgh admitted he and Harding and two other men had spent two or three dollars each for drinks and chewing tobacco at the Central House. Asked what they had to drink Hedden replied "Near beer." He, however, admitted that he was himself "feeling good." He had tried to take Harding home with him but when half way there Harding got away from him and went back downtown. Hedden said he got home about 10:10 o'clock and went to sleep on a couch.

After hearing statements from the various persons Coroner Tucker seemed satisfied that Harding, through the influence of liquor, had made a mistake in attempting to enter the wrong house which resulted in his death. Although the coroner made no decision it is evident that Schoonmaker will not be held criminally for his acts, as he under the circumstances, was justified.

Harding's funeral wil be held Wednesday with interment in Gardiner.

MATTERS BEFORE COUNTY COURT

Winne Executors Fail to Recover on Note—Many Jurors Excused—8 Cases Ready — Conlin's Liquor Held.

In county court, which convened Monday afternoon at the court house Judge Fowler presiding, the action brought by John B. Winne and Effie H. Winne of Phoenicia against Orlando Short of Wittenberg was taken up for trial. Mr. and Mrs. Winne appeared as the executors of the will of Martin Winne, an uncle of Mr. Winne, who died in June, 1919. Among the papers of Martin Winne was a note for $100 given by Orlando Short. As executors of the will, Mr. and Mrs. Winne brought the action to recover the amount of the note with interest.

The note was made in May, 1918, and was for one year, "with interest at 6 per cent." Mr. Short claimed that about ten days prior to the death of Martin Winne the note was paid and Mr. Winne promised to send back the note. Before this was done he died.

Under the law Mr. Short is prohibited from giving any testimony as to the payment of the note as the holder of the note, Martin Winne, is dead. Mrs. Short was called to the stand and testified that Mr. Winne came to Wittenberg about two weeks prior to his death and a short time after the note was due and that he had a conversation with Mr. Short outside, that they came up to the house and Mr. Short came in and together they counted out $100 and her husband and Mr Winne stood together on the porch while the money was paid She did not see the money exchange hands, but said she knew the note had been paid.

After being out a short time the jury returned a verdict of no cause of action. John W. Eckert appeared for plaintiff and Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., for defendant.

Many Jurors Excused.

On the call of jurors, Neal McCullough of the town of Ulster was reported to have died; George Simpson of the town of Lloyd was absent but sent a doctor's certificate; John J. Freer of Esopus was absent and was reported not to have been served.

Judge Fowler excused the following jurors: Charles Crook, Shawangunk; Robert Cummings, Lloyd; Henry Davis, Marbletown; Leslie Delancy, Wawarsing; Andries Du-Bois, Lloyd, excused to January 23; Andrew Evett, Esopus; E. Frank Flanagan, Kingston, who is an exempt fireman; Warren Grimley, Marlborough, who is over the age limit and whose name was ordered taken from the jury box; John Polypeon, Olive; Loren Secor, Olive; Charles Signor, Olive; Friend Wiklow, Rochester; John J. Wood, Rochester, excused to January 23.

Less Than One-Third Ready.

Of the sixteen civil cases on the calendar, only five were marked for trial. The balance were reserved or were put over the term.

Peace Warrants Continued.

In the cases of The People against Victor Brady, and two others, Christiana and Pardee, in which peace warrants had been issued by magistrates, District Attorney Traver stated that there were appearances against the defendants and therefore asked that the peace warrants be continued to the next term of court, which was granted.

Conlin's Liquor Held.

The alleged whiskey, wine and hard cider seized recently by the police department at the saloon of John F. Conlin on John street was ordered held by Judge Fowler. The order issued in connection with the search and seizure proceedings was returnable on January 8, which was Sunday, and ex-Mayor William D. Brinnier, who appeared for Conlin, moved that the seized goods be returned to Conlin. Mr Brinnier said he had appeared at the court house on Sunday, January 8, but could not find the judge or any complaining witness there.

In opposing the application, District Attorney Traver said he had not had anything to do with the preparation of the warrant, or order, which was a police matter, but even though a mistake had been made in making the warrant returnable on Sunday there was no doubt about the warrant being properly served, or that it had resulted in the seizure of liquor. If Mr. Conlin wanted the liquor returned, he could apply to the court in the regular way.

Judge Fowler said he would hold that the seizure was lawful even if the order was in error, and he would deny the motion to return it to Conlin.
